Canvas $20,000 a Foot Chrysler Builds High Mr. Rockefeller's New's Cottages $1.10 Per Week

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

THE EARTH is beautiful and its best real estate corners are valuable, some in New York worth $500 a square foot and more.

But New York, corner of Broad and Wall streets, itself isn't worth as much per feet as a piece of canvas after a good artist has finished with it.

Colonel Friedsam, of New York, has just bought a little painting by Vermeer, called "Allegory of the New Testament," paying for it $20,000 a square foot. Therefore, if your little boy shows no talent as a real estate agent, make him a painter.

Walter P. Chrysler, whose stockholders ought to insure his life, since it would be difficult to replace him, does first one thing, then another, without waiting between.

Now he is building a sixty-eight story office building in the middle of Manhattan, to cost fourteen millions. More power to him and all that go up, high into the air, giving architectural and building genius a chance. More power also to S. W. Straus, man of vision, whose company lends $7,500,000 on the new building.

Mr. Rockefeller turned oil, plus business ability, and, as he said, "patience and economy," into one of the world's great fortunes.

Now he turns that fortune into something worth more than gold, namely, PUBLIC HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

The Rockefeller Institute announces a "convalescent serum" giving wonderful results in infantile paralysis. Slowly science conquers disease, as knowledge conquers superstition.

The British Viscountess Byng of Vimy knocked with a silver key on the doors of newly built four-room cottages. They cost $758 each, and the rents them for $1.10 a week.

As she knocked each door the countess, following an old custom, threw in a loaf of bread and a lump of coal, that the tenant might never lack food or warmth.

The countess will get more than a few cents on her invest ment when it is found that no one in the United Kingdom, for instance:

Just to show bears that this is no time to sell short, stocks did quite well in Wall Street did all sorts of things yesterday.

Some stocks shot up $30 a share. And end bears are heard to murmur "I shall wait until every stock on the list passes $200 before I ever sell anything again, and then I won't sell."

The fact is that this is a PROSPEROUS country, with all due respect to Democrats that call our prosperity a myth.

And while you should never gamble, since it is both wrong and unprofitable, you should be extra careful not to sell short.

Wise spending is at least as important as wise saving, and often more profitable.

For instance, before the Panama Canal was built, before this country had learned to spend billions, many shivered at the thought of a $300,000,000 enterprise. Since 1914, that canal has collected in tolls $150,307,737.

It will pay for itself many times, in addition to more than doubling the value of the United States Navy and promoting the shipping interests of the whole world.

Today William Edward Hickman, after long delay, paid with his life for kidnaping and murdering a little girl in California.

After his conviction Hickman joined the Catholic Church and prayed for those that brought his conviction and sent him to the gallows. That is kind of him, but unless religion is much mistaken, it is he that needs prayer.

The worst of this Hickman incident, next to the crime itself, is the fact that it encourages other young morons to feel that murder is, after all, "not dangerous, and you have plenty of time."

For the first time in 70 years Italy has executed a criminal. The Italian method is to shut a man up for life in solitary confinement, seeing no one, talking to no one, containers of food pushed into the cell by a man that the prisoner does not see.

Michele Della Maggiore, convicted of killing two Facists, should be grateful that he was shot yesterday.

Death, which some Christian Scientists call "The Valley of Illusion," is not a thing to fear. Solitary imprisonment is horrible.

POLICY HOLDERS FACING HEAVY ASSESSMENTS IN CAR INSURANCE DEFICIT

More than 45,000 Massachusetts policyholders in the Car Owners' Mutual Insurance Company of Boston face the threat of a heavy assessment and have been operating their automobiles without the full measure of legal protection to which they are entitled, according to disclosures made today at the State House.

Serious financial shortage of the company, estimated by state examiners as high as $400,000 at one time, is officially given as the cause.

Although the condition of the Car Owners' Mutual has been known to the State Department of Insurance for months the facts have been withheld from policyholders and the public.

COMMITTEE IN SPAT AT HOSPITAL INQUIRY

Joseph P. Manning, chairman of the trustees of the Boston City Hospital, testifying before the City Council inquiry today, admitted the institution is handicapped by lack of head nurses and inability to hire its own help.

Chairman Manning was one of only three witnesses called to the stand by the special committee appointed to investigate charges by Councilman Thomas W. McMahon that his four-year-old daughter was permitted to bleed to death after an operation for removal of tonsils and adenoids.

The committee adjourned after a session of only about an hour and a half, largely devoted to wrangling between the members as to whether the hospital was to be whitewashed, and during which spectators who crowded the galleries of the council chamber were rebuked for creating an uproar.

Chairman John I. Fitzgerald of the committee took occasion to de-

HOPE FOR SEA FLIER IS FADING

London, Oct. 19 (AP)—Flares that had burned all night at Croydon and other airdromes to guide Lieut.-Comdr. M. C. MacDonald to a safe landing were extinguished at dawn today and hope that he had survived went out of the hearts of many. It was the general belief that he had become the 19th victim in the effort to fly the Atlantic and has been missing more than 50 hours.

At the most his tiny moth plane, in which he risked his life in an attempt to fly alone from Newfoundland, could hold only enough gasoline for 46 hours of flying, and the 48th hour passed at 10:31 p. m. last night, Eastern standard time.

Airdrome officials were decidedly

HUB FOOTBALL MAD ON EVE OF ARMY GAME

The eve of the Harvard Army game finds Boston and vicinity football mad.

The rush for tickets, which are almost impossible to get at any price, has resulted in the appearance of counterfeit pasteboards, and some of these have been sold for as high as $40 a pair.

The "specs" have a few legitimate tickets which they are holding tight, knowing that they can get almost anything they ask for them just before the game.

Thousands who have not a chance of seeing the game are going to the game that they made to pick up a stray duck who can quit that hotel accommodations at a premium.

Never before in the history of intercollegiate football have there as much interest in a game as there is in this clash between Eddie Mahan's future generals and the sons of John Harvard on the gridiron greensward.

PROSPERITY BANNER IS WAVED BY COOLIDGE

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 19 (INS)—President Coolidge hoisted the banner of prosperity above the nation and the Republican administration here today in a manner which generally was interpreted as an answer to the recent attacks of Governor Smith, the Democratic presidential nominee.

Coming to Virginia to play the leading role in the dedication of the memorial to the battlefields of Fredericksburg, the Wilderness, Spotsylvania and Chancellorsville—scenes of the conflicts of the Civil War—Mr. Coolidge devoted more than half of his speech to the economic and the national prosperity and the serenity of the people.

The address fairly breathed prosperity. The United States today

GOV. SMITH'S SPEECH IN HUB TO BE ON LABOR

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Correspondent.

Chicago, Oct. 19—Announcing that he intended to discuss foreign relations, reorganization of federal government departments and labor problems before the presidential campaign winds up, Governor Smith of New York today revealed that he had reserved the speech on labor for the night on his visit to Boston Wednesday, Oct. 24.

Asked why he had not touched on these subjects before, he said: "I am taking up one topic at a time, and the campaign has nearly two and a half weeks to go. Will cover them all before the windup."

This is "Al Smith" day in Chicago, and his speech here is expected to be the most important of his campaign for the electoral votes of the midwest and western states.

Yet he has not discussed any of these he has selected for the address tonight in the 121st Regiment Armory.

BUT THREE WITNESSES HEARD

clare that the hospital would not be whitewashed, and Manning, for the trustees, protested they wanted no whitewash, but did wish to co-operate.

In response to questions Chairman Manning said it would relieve conditions at the City Hospital if all drunk cases were treated at Haymarket Relief Station, but two years ago "they pulled the house down on our ears," when an attempt was made to put through the change.

The special committee, consisting of Chairman Fitzgerald and Councilmen Edward Gallagher, John F. Dowd, Robert G. Wilson, Jr., and William G. Lynch, went into session in the Council chamber at 10:45.

GALLERIES ARE FILLED.

Hospital trustees headed by Chairman Manning and including Dr. George G. Sears, Cary I. Dreyfuss, Alexander Whiteside and Dr. Henry S. Rowen, with Supt. Dowling, arrived shortly before the session began and took seats at the right. The galleries were filled with spectators.

The presiding officer then asked for Dr. Alexander J. Campbell, resident surgeon at the hospital, but he was not in the room at the time, and Miss Margaret Gates was called to the stand. She testified that she is a night student nurse at the hospital in charge of the casualty ward, and that she saw Chairman Fitzgerald in the casualty ward last night.

The witness was then excused and Councillor McMahon was asked to state his complaint. He asked permission to read the original complaint which he made to the City Council, and this being granted, read the charges. These included negligence on the part of hospital authorities who he claimed had permitted his little girl to bleed to death, following the operation, and also unsanitary conditions.

ATTACKS TRUSTEES.

After reading the statement Councilman McMahon nodded the charge that his child was placed in a cot recently occupied by the boy of a Mr. Laundrigan, his neighbor, who was asked by Dr. Dinand to identify the dead child.

"I consider that gross negligence," he said, "for a nurse to be made like that, as it might mean the child who needed treatment wouldn't get it, and vice versa." He attacked the trustees, claiming they had no first-hand knowledge of conditions in the institution.

Questioned by Councilman Dowd, he said Dr. Leary, the medical examiner whose report exonerated the hospital from responsibility in connection with the McMahon death, had not seen Rose Mary alive or dead. He added that Dr. Dowling had admitted to him it was a food cart on which he saw bandages, and that conditions were disgraceful.

Councilman William Lynch then offered a motion that after the McMahon charges were heard other complaints might be received, which was passed.

WANTS SPECIAL BOARD.

Councilman Dowd: "I have the utmost regard for the trustees and superintendent, but they will back up the hospital. We can't expect anything else. In order to get an impartial hearing and find out what is wrong, if anything, I offer a motion that a board of five competent physicians and surgeons not connected with any city institution shall be appointed by this committee to assist the committee, one to be appointed by each member."

Chairman Manning was then given permission to make a statement, and said he had asked the mayor two months ago for money with which to have an impartial survey of the hospital made by the Rockefeller Foundation or a similar organization.

Councilman Dowd: "If this committee wants an honest and impartial investigation it should not allow the trustees or mayor to control it." Applause followed his statement.

"LET'S HEAR TESTIMONY".

Councilman Gallagher: "It seems to me this council is big enough to conduct this investigation. If we feel after hearing the testimony here that we need a board of doctors and surgeons to assist us, of course we will appoint one."

Councilman Wilson: "No one will accuse me of desiring a whitewash after my record here. If we are going to accomplish anything we should have a full and fair hearing. It should not be used for publicity seeking or for political purposes. I don't need the American Hospital Association or the Rockefeller Foundation to tell me whether I stepped on a cockroach at the City Hospital or not. I suggest that motion (Dowd's) be laid on the table."

Councilman Dowd then suggested the matter be referred to the committee in executive session, which was adopted.

WANTS FAIR INQUIRY.

Chairman Fitzgerald: "I want to say at this time there will be no whitewash. Also, I want to say, if you folks sitting in the gallery want to stay and hear the testimony you must refrain from applause. This committee is not to be stampeded or intimidated by anyone. We are dealing with human life."

Councilor McMahon: "I feel, as I told the committee before, that I want a fair, honest investigation. My charges are based on what happened after the operation was performed."

Dr. Campbell, who had entered the council chamber during the arguments, was then called to the stand. He was merely asked if he saw Councilmen Fitzgerald and Dowd at the hospital last night and if they went through the institution. Replying in the affirmative, he was then excused and Mr. Manning called.

CALLS FOR RECORDS

He was asked by Chairman Fitzgerald to furnish the committee with the records of various employes, complaints against each if any and disposition; operations of doctors, complaints of patients and visitors, records of nurses on duty in each ward, the number of patients cared for, and any complaints against nurses.

Chairman Fitzgerald: "We would like to know if you asked for any money for equipment and whether the amount was reduced. We want to know if all the money needed for enough nurses and orderlies was given."

Councilman Dowd: We understand the hospital is compelled to take help sent to it from the city employment bureau.

Chairman Manning: "It is true. We get both good and bad help in that way."

He said if the hospital was allowed to select its own help he thought a better class would be obtained. He added the hospital should have power to discharge them, however.

The head of the trustees was then asked by Fitzgerald about a drunken ambulance driver, and replied the man was reinstated and given 3 months back pay after the trustees had voted to discharge him. He thought the size of the board should not be increased.

FAILS TO HALT GILDA GRAY

London, Oct. 19 (AP)—Application by Gil Boag for an injunction to restrain his wife, Gilda Gray, dancer and screen actress, from appearing in the British film "Piccadilly" was denied in the Chancery division today.

Boag alleged that Miss Gray, by a previous contract with him under which he was acting as her manager, was to pay him 40 per cent of her earnings.

The court held that as Boag had not negotiated or closed any contract for Miss Gray and as he could find no contract by Gilda not to act for anybody else, he was unable to grant the injunction.

Recent dispatches from Los Angeles said that documents had been filed as the first step in marriage annulment proceedings ordered started by Boag against Miss Gray. Last July the dancer filed a divorce complaint in Fort Washington, Wis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, is overwhelmed by the enthusiasm of the American people over his achievement and the reception and welcome that has been given him without end.

Before leaving for Washington to breakfast today with President Coolidge, Dr. Eckener announced the Zeppelin would start on her return trip to Germany on Saturday, Oct. 27, and he said the me:

"I wish you would express for me through the Hearst newspapers my gratefulness and very deep appreciation of the cordiality of the welcome given the crew of the Graf Zeppelin and myself and the courtesies and kindnesses that have been showered on us.

TOUCHED BY TRIBUTES

"Please also say that it is physically impossible for me to answer the telegrams and letters that rained in on me and that I take this means of expressing my thanks.

"I have been deeply touched by all these manifestations of admiration of our achievement and by the many evidences of friendly feeling.

"As I have no secretary, it is impossible for me to answer all these telegrams, much less accept even a small fraction of the invitations to visit the different cities.

"I am sorry that I cannot go to more cities and thus show my appreciation of all that is expressed in so many telegrams. But, we must soon start back across the Atlantic for Germany."

On next Wednesday morning, very early, the Graf Zeppelin will leave Lakehurst direct for St. Louis, with a number of invited guests.

The route, it is expected, will go via Pittsburgh and Cincinnatti.

The Commodore wants to reach Scott Field at St. Louis before dark. Capt. Hans von Schiller "ground pilot" of the Graf Zeppelin, will be sent on ahead to St. Louis to make all arrangements for landing.

TO VISIT CHICAGO

Dr. Eckener and his crew will spend the night in St. Louis and expect to leave the next morning for Chicago, Milwaukee and Detroit.

In that world's motor car center, the Graf Zeppelin will be moored to Henry Ford's mooring-mast, long enough for Eckener to participate in a luncheon there.

From Detroit the course will be via Cleveland to Buffalo, thence over Rochester and Albany to New York and Lakehurst. Whether the Graf Zeppelin will pass over Akron, Ohio, outward bound, or when returning, the doctor is not yet certain.

JUDGE DUBUQUE RESIGNS TO GO UNDER KNIFE

Judge Hugo A. Dubuque, for 16 years a superior court justice, resigned from the bench today in order to undergo a serious operation next Monday.

He had been assigned as presiding justice in Middlesex Superior Court for the duration of the court year, but in the past few years an old complaint has become so aggravated that an operation is now deemed imperative.

Following announcement of his resignation it was made known that his place on the bench will be taken by Judge Patrick M. Keating.

In announcing his resignation Judge Dubuque bade good-bye to court attaches and the jury panel and thanked them for their services under him.

In reply, the attaches and jurors, through ex-Rep. Arthur N. Newhall passed unanimously a resolution extending Judge Dubuque best wishes for a speedy recovery.

The judge will be 71 years old next November 4. He was appointed to the Superior Court bench in 1912 by Governor Eugene N. Foss. His home is in Fall River.

HICKMAN DIES WITH JAZZ IN HIS EAR AND PRAYER ON HIS LIP

Hickman's iron nerve failed him at last as death beckoned. He fainted just before the trap was sprung, his declaration was made without nullification by official Executioner Robert Hogaboom.

Twenty-two seconds after he had entered the death chamber the noose had been adjusted and the trap was sprung.

Prays on Gallows

For hours this morning Hickman played "blues" jazz tunes on a phonograph as he prepared to die.

He studiously avoided the gaze of the 300 or more persons gathered below to see his punishment for a crime which shocked the civilized world. He looked over and above the heads of the crowds, his neck drawn back as he stared upward.

It appeared to the crowd for a moment that he was about to collapse, but this was only his legs crumpling under him as the trap dropped with a thud, which brought exclamations from the closely grouped spectators.

The death parade entered the chamber a few seconds before 10:30 o'clock. James B. Holohan, tall, broad-shouldered, stern-faced warden, was in the lead.

He was followed by Father Fleming, pastor of the Church of San Rafael, who has been spiritual adviser to Hickman. The priest, a significant figure in his black cassock, was repeating the "Litany of the Saints," for those who are about to die.

The litany began as Hickman stepped out of the death cell when Father Fleming commenced speaking the words:

"Lord have mercy; Lord have mercy."

In a weak voice, Hickman responded:

"Christ have mercy."

With rapid steps the group, two guards beside Hickman and the official executioner, Robert Hogaboom, in front, walked through the two wooden doors leading from the death cell to the execution chamber. All the while Father Fleming continued the Litany with Hickman making half-audible responses.

As they neared the first of the 13 steps, Father Fleming spoke softly:

"All ye holy virgins and widows; all ye men and women, saints of God; be merciful."

Hickman's lips moved in response with the words:

"Intercede for me, spare me, O Lord. Graciously hear us, Lord."

By now the group were on the platform of the scaffolding.

Grim "Eternity"

Fr. Fleming began to speak softly again as he stood by Hickman's side:

"We commend to Thee, O Lord, the soul of thy servant, William Edward Hickman, and we beseech Thee, O Lord Jesus Christ, Saviour of the world, that Thou wouldst not refuse to receive into the bosom of Thy patriarchs for whose sake Thou dost mercifully come down earth."

It seemed to spectators an eternity in itself before the grim work of placing about Hickman the various paraphernalia for the hanging was completed.

It was, however, only a few seconds. The warden touched Father Fleming on the arm and indicated where he was to stand. This did not interrupt the litany the priest was reciting.

Executioner Hogaboom placed a long black cap-like hood over Hickman's head. It fell almost to his shoulders.

Trap Is Sprung

The hangman then pulled down the ¾-inch rope which had been placed in a position on the scaffold so it would not be seen by the prisoner as he walked up to the platform.

Hogaboom then placed the rope about Hickman's neck, the heavy knot directly beneath the youth's right ear, the purpose of this being to render him unconscious if the fall of some five feet did not instantly break his neck.

One guard adjusted a strap around Hickman's feet. His hands already had been strapped at his sides, giving him a stiff and grewsome appearance.

The executioner, having less to do than the others, was finished before the two guards. He glanced quickly at them as they looked toward him. An unspoken signal told him the last moment had come.

He raised his right hand. It was the signal for the three men in the little box-like room on one side of the gallows.

Hardly had he raised his hand when these men must have slashed at three small cotton cords, one of which connected with a heavy iron ball which in turn released the trap through which Hickman's body shot to death.

The moment the trap was sprung one person fainted and fell to the floor. Later another man, Detective Lucas of Los Angeles, also fainted.

The two prison physicians, Drs. Blecker and Robinson, waiting inside the raised square at the foot of the gibbet, stepped forward as Hickman's body dangled momentarily and began to curb the motion of the rope.

Dr. Blecker put out his right hand and stopped the movement of the dead man. He then mounted a small ader, unbuttoned Hickman's black trousers and held a stethoscope above the heart.

Standing near Hickman's dangling feet Dr. Robinson reached up and grasped the slayer's left wrist.

In Death Throes

Hickman had clutched the hem o fhis coat with his right hand as he dropped an dthe fingers of his left hand were clenched tightly.

His neck, reddened by the vise-like grip of the noose, soon whitened until it again took on the shell-like color of flesh.

A felt slipper dropped from his right foot to the rough board floor with a sound which even with several hundred men present, was plainly heard in the hush.

Faints at End

The official executioner had hardly raised his right hand as a signal for the trap to drop when the tense spectators saw Hickman's knees begin to bend. His body sagged, and he was practically hanging from the noose when the three concealed men cut the three cotton strings, one of which freed the iron weight which, in turn, released the trap.

The executioner alone realized that Hickman had fainted.

Throughout the early hours today a small phonograph ground out again and again the doleful strains of the "Blues." At times Hickman would doze only to suddenly awake and shut the music off and read his Bible and prayerbook. He wrote seven letters to his mother and received one from her.

In it she told him she could not come to see him before he died. She said much else—but neither Hickman nor Warden Holohan would reveal the contents of the letter. Hickman, after reading it silently and without comment, scrawled a note across the bottom of the last page—stuck it into an envelope and mailed it back to his mother.

Early this morning Hickman asked for telegraph blanks and dispatched several telegrams to chiefs of police in cities where he admitted he committed crimes. He asked them for forgiveness.

He talked for hours with his guards and surveyed critically the black civilian suit brought to him to replace his prison dungarees. Hickman seemed pleased with his death attire.

Thes won't be any mourners at Hickman's funeral. There won't be any relatives or friends. Hickman's father will be in Los Angeles on his way back to his home in Texas. He left San Francisco early today after his final plea to be with his boy in death was refused by Warden Holohan.

San Francisco, Oct. 19 (INS)—Jerome Walsh, chief counsel for William Edward Hickman, today revealed he had been threatened with death unless he ceased his efforts to save Hickman.

"I received letters," he said, "which threaten me with death if I do not stop my efforts to save Hickman's life; others said I would suffer bodily harm unless Hickman was hanged. They are the usual 'nut' letters, unworthy of consideration."

Walsh asserted he wanted it plainly understood that his client was Mrs. Eva Hickman, the condemned man's mother.

"If Hickman's parents were as wealthy as those of Loeb and Leopold, I do not believe Hickman would have hanged today," Walsh said.

Hickman Strangled, Neck Not Broken, Says Doctor

San Quentin Prison, Cal., Oct. 19 (INS)—Dr. S. M. Marcus of Los Angeles, psychiatrist who originally declared Hickman insane, asserted after the execution that the condemned man had strangled; that his neck was not broken by the fall.

Hickman Boastful That His Crime Was Worst

San Quentin Prison, Cal., Oct. 19 (AP)—Apparently indifferent to his fate, William Edward Hickman awoke today after a short but sound sleep and chatted with guards about the career of crime that ends at the gallows.

The condemned youth reviewed his crime career from the first time he held up a drug clerk to the kidnaping and murder of the little Parker girl in Los Angeles.

"This was the most atrocious crime in history," he said.

Guards said that he made no inquiries about the time of day. He waited anxiously, however, for the arrival of a priest.

4 REST CASE IN BIG RUM TRIAL

Providence, Oct. 19 (AP)—Counsel for four Connecticut men, charged with conspiracy in connection with the seizure of the gigantic distillery at the Glenbrook Mill, Woonsocket, R. I., last December, announced when the jurymen entered the federal courtroom in Providence, where the trials are now in progress, that he would offer no defense.

His clients are Ralph H. Blakeslee, alias Borson, former Connecticut dry chief, of New Haven, Ct., former Dry Agent J. Edward Sabine and Robert Babbins, both of New Haven, and John Sorokes, alias Smith, of Hamden, Ct.

Motions made concerning testimony involving the four Connecticut men were denied by the court. These motions which opened the fourth day of the trial, in which four Woonsocket men are also charged with conspiracy, were followed by the resting of the cases of the four defendants from Connecticut. Motions to quash the indictments against the Woonsocket men also were denied by Judge Ira L. Letts.

DEMAND LEGION MEET PROBE

San Antonio, Oct. 19 (AP)—Local dissatisfaction with high American Legion workers has led to a proposed investigation of the Legion bureau which directed the 10th annual national convention of the American Legion which ended here recently.

In a meeting so chaotic that scheduled election of post officers was sidetracked, the Alamo post of the Legion voted unanimously to investigate the convention bureau and letting of concessions. The proposed investigation was the tools of a bitter debate.

The chief of police and six of his aides stood in the hall while Wayne Davis, prominent in the Texas organizment, alleged "open gambling" went on in the hotel housing headquarters of the Legion during the convention. Davis' resolution for an inquiry into the alleged gambling phase was adopted.

Henry Lee Taylor, post commander, told the meeting that he repeatedly had asked for reports on activities of the convention bureau and had been told it was none of his business. He said he resigned from the bureau 15 days before the convention got under way because he was not allowed the information he sought.

Eddie Machugh Refutes Claim He's for Hoover

Anyone who reads the name of Eddie Machugh, Brighton tenor, and Eddie MacHugh, Brookline baritone, can perceive the difference a small "h" or its capital makes.

But not as a radio audience, who hear the same pronounciation for both names from the announcer.

So up steps the Brighton tenor to refute the recent impression among his friends that he has disguised his voice to sing the praises of the Republican presidential nominee in the ditty, "Hoover the Great."

That service to the G. O. P., the Brighton artist declares, is being vocally rendered by the Brookline baritone, and to clinch his argument has written for Smith the song, "Our Al to Succeed Cal."

SINCLAIR LEASE CANCELLED

By JOHN A. KENNEDY

Copyright, 1928, Universal Service

Washington, Oct. 19—Cancellation of all extension contracts for government royalty oil has been ordered by Secretary of the Interior Roy O. West, following the decision of Atty.-Gen. Sargent invalidating the Sinclair crude oil purchasing company's $65,000,000 Salt Creek contract, it was learned today.

Sargent's action followed exclusive disclosure by Universal Service last May that the Sinclair contract, originally granted by Albert B. Fall, contained a secret option for renewal for five years after its termination.

Up to today only one additional contract was found by the Department of the Interior to have been made as a result of the option clause which Atty.-Gen. Sargent held invalid. But all oil contracts are being investigated.

It is with the Lewiston Oil & Refining Company, and grants that company the right to purchase all government royalty oil from the Cat Creek Field in Montana. The full contract involved approximately $10,000,000 of royalty oil.

This contract was negotiated by Albert B. Fall on December 23, 1922, and contained an option by which the company could renew it for an additional five years from December 23, 1927, by filing notice with the Secretary of the Interior.

It was renewed on March 24, 1928, by Hubert Work, then Secretary of the Interior and now chairman of the Republican national committee.

Dr. Work's action followed a request by Senator Thomas J. Walsh (D), of Montana, who wrote in behalf of "constituents who are interested in the matter" to determine whether the department construed the option clause as entitling the Lewiston Oil & Refining Co. to a renewal.

In a letter to Senator Walsh on January 17, 1927, Work replied: "It is the opinion of the department that under the terms of its contract the Lewiston Oil & Refining Co. will be entitled, upon notice given by it on July 1, 1927, to renew said contract, upon the same terms and conditions as therein provided."

It was stated at the interior department that Senator Walsh was notified as soon as the contract was renewed.

Senator Walsh recently charged that the option clause in the Sinclair lease was illegal, after having written a letter last February expressing an opinion that the secretary of the interior was in law bound to renew the Sinclair contract. After additional facts were placed before him, however, Senator Walsh changed his opinion.

CHURCHILL, GILBERT AND POINCARE IN CONFERENCE

Paris, Oct. 19 (AP)—Winston Churchill, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, made a surprise overnight trip to Paris with S. Parker Gilbert, Jr., agent-general for reparations. They were received by Premier Poincare and conferred with him for more than an hour today. It is understood the trio discussed the composition of the committee of experts that will review the question of German reparations early in December. This committee will try to determine the limits of Germany's reparations indebtedness in the light of the experience of the last five years.

ZEPP OFFICERS BREAKFAST AT WHITE HOUSE

Washington, Oct. 19 (AP)—The official welcome of the National Capital was extended today to Dr. Hugo Eckener and four of his comrades on the transatlantic flight of the Graf Zeppelin.

The famous pilot and associates were guests of President and Mrs. Coolidge at breakfast at the White House, where they met Secretary Wilbur, Secretary Kent, Acting Secretary of State J. Reuben Clark and the three assistant secretaries for aeronautics, Mr. Warner, Davison and MacCracken, of the Navy, War and Commerce Departments respectively. Described as "a good old American breakfast," the menu consisted of melon, hot-cakes, maple syrup, eggs and coffee.

Dr. Eckener was accompanied to Washington from Philadelphia by Count Alexander von Brandenstein-Zeppelin, son-in-law of the late Count Zeppelin; Staff Captain Ernst Lehmann, Col. Emilio Herrera of the Spanish air force and Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, U. S. Navy observer on the Atlantic flight.

Those meting them included Dr. Otto Kiep, charge d'affaires of the German embassy; Maj. Victoriano Casajus, military attache of the Spanish embassy, and Maj. Frank N. Kennedy of the United States air forces, who accompanied Dr. Eckener on the flight across the Atlantic four years ago of the Los Angeles, then the ZR3.

RECEIVED BY HOOVER

After leaving the White House the party journeyed to Herbert Hoover's personal headquarters on Massachusetts ave., and there posed for pictures with the Republican presidential nominee.

Mr. Hoover, in receiving the Eckener party, expressed the hope that a regular transatlantic air service could be built up, adding that in every shortening of communication there was added solidarity between peoples.

Dr. Eckener told the Republican presidential candidate that this trip was the first of several trial flights he hopes to make, first, to establish confidence in lighter-than-air transportation, and, second, to investigate and determine the routes necessary for the most expeditious transit.

Mr. Hoover recalled that it required many years for sailing ships of the old days to determine which were the most favorable routes at different seasons and different times and that he presumed that this was one of the necessary determinations to be made for transatlantic development of lighter-than-air transportation.

"SAVIOR OF GERMANY"

The nominee complimented Dr. Eckener and his crew upon "the fine courage of yourself and companions" and on the fact that Germany should be the first to make this flight since that country had been the pioneer in lighter-than-air transportation. He added that the American people welcomed the first flight of what he hoped would be a great commercial development.

Dr. Eckener was further told that in the American people he would find not only an enormous satisfaction at the success of the flight, but Mr. Hoover expressed the hope that a regular service could be built up.

Capt. Ernest A. Lehmann, first officer of the Graf Zeppelin, while at the Hoover headquarters, expressed pleasure at meeting the man whom he described as "the savior of Germany" during the post-war period.

"It is a great pleasure to be here," Capt. Lehmann said. "Had it not been for Herbert Hoover and his efforts for the relief of Germany thousands and thousands of our people would have starved after the war."

From Hoover headquarters the guests went to the Navy Department, where they were received by Secretary Wilbur.

From the Navy Department, Dr. Eckener and his party were escorted by motorcycle police to the state, war and navy building. There they were again greeted by small groups of government workers with applause and cheers. They visited Secretary Davis of the War Department, and Assistant Secretary Clark of the State Department briefly. Then they went to the Department of Commerce to pay their respects to Secretary Whiting.

Next the fliers visited the Lincoln Memorial and from there went to Arlington Cemetery, where Dr. Eckener laid a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Returning to Washington, the party went to Bolling field, where Ernst von Brandenburg, who is the head of civil aeronautics of the communication department of the German government, and several members of the group went aloft for an aerial sightseeing tour in an army plane.

Eckener and others in the party went over to the Anacostia naval air base and flew over the capital in a naval plane.

Later they were guests at luncheon of the assistant secretaries for aeronautics at the navy, army and commerce departments.

Dr. Eckener said the Graf Zeppelin would probably take off shortly after daylight Wednesday to come to earth overnight at Scott field, Ets St. Louis.

Lady Drummond-Hay, who was a passenger on the Graf Zeppelin, has come to Washington today, but took no part in the celebration except for general social engagements.

GOING TO AKRON, O.

Plans call for Dr. Eckener to leave here tomorrow afternoon for Akron, O., home of the Goodyear Zeppelin Co. From there he will go to Chicago, to return to Lakehurst, N. J., by Tuesday.

Henry Ford will be invited to take this trip, or one from Ens St. Louis which is expected to extend through a section of the Middle West, including visits over Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit.

Dr. Eckener said he would likely return the airship to Lakehurst by Thursday for refueling in preparation for the return trip to Germany, which he expects to begin by Saturday, Oct. 27.

Dr. Eckener expressed regret that it would not be possible to accept many invitations received from cities throughout the country to visit those points.

Child Plays Happily as Missing Daddy 'Flies Over the Sea'

London, Oct. 19 (AP)—Ian MacDonald, five-year-old son of Lieut.-Comdr. H. C. MacDonald, played happily in his home today, too young to share in the general anxiety concerning his father, long overdue on an attempt to fly from Newfoundland.

"My daddy's flying over the sea," the child said. "I am going to see him today."

The mother kept vigil throughout the night near the telephone, hoping in vain of hearing some definite news of her husband, who is believed by many to have perished.

SMITH SPEECH IN HUB TO BE ON 'LABOR'

Chicago Greets Smith in Swirling "Paper Blizzard"

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP)—Down a narrow lane cut with difficulty by police between a shouting throng that crowded the sidewalks to the curbing, Governor Alfred E. Smith, Democratic presidential nominee, rode through Chicago's loop today in a storm of ticker tape that formed a paper carpet in the street for the procession.

Crowds jammed the downtown streets an hour before the Governor's tour o the city started and when the procession of cars finally left the Congress Hotel, shortly afternoon, it was met by cheering thousands whose wild demonstration for the Democratic standard bearer rolled like a wave ahead of him as his car wended its way at snail-like pace through the downtown district.

Governor Smith, wearing his famous brown derby sat on the back of an open car and bowed and waved at the crowds while shredded telephone directories and newspapers showered on him like falling snow. His car was almost surrounded by cameramen grinding away frantically as the crowds broke through a line of 1200 policemen and surged into the streets with shouts of "Hello Al" and "Chicago's for Smith."

EX-OFFICER IS SENTENCED FOR ATTACK

George F. Outus, 38, former state patrol officer and at one time a member of the Concord police department, was found guilty by Judge Clifford B. Sanborn in Dedham court today of two complaints brought against him by Wellesley girls.

On the charge of attacking a 13-year-old Dana Hall student he was sentenced to six months in the Dedham House of Correction, and on the charge of having accosted the daughter of a prominent Wellesley physician he received the additional sentence of a month in the same institution. He appealed both sentences.

Wellesley police prosecuting the complaints told the court both cases had arisen within the past 12 months.

The finding of guilty was made by Judge Sanborn despite the appearance of seven alibi witnesses on behalf of the defendant. Outus, who gave his address as Crest st., West Concord, in his self-defense testimony, declared he was at present employed by a Boston insurance firm as an adjuster.

said, is enjoying a "general standard of living never before experienced by any people in human history."

Without taking any direct cognizance of Smith's challenge to Herbert Hoover and the Republican party to prove that the country was being run economically and prosperously, the President, nevertheless, went straight down the line in cataloging America's assets and claims to world leadership, commercially and industrially.

Because of the nature of today's ceremonies, the Executive compared the present with the Civil War period, quoted 1860 figures as against 1928. National wealth, which was then 16 billions, is now 359 billions, he said.

GROWTH OF FOREIGN TRADE

Foreign trade has grown from $785,000,000 to more than $9,000,000,000. Railroad mileage has increased from 31,000 to about 249,000 and its revenues from $155,000,000 to $6,250,000,000. Manufactured products have jumped from less than 2,500,000,000 to nearly 62,000,000,000. Farm products have gone from less than $7,500,000,000 to about $13,000,000,000.

"So great has been our enterprise and industry," Mr. Coolidge declared, "that with only 7 per cent of the land and 6 per cent of the population of the world, we produce over 50 per cent of the grains and basic raw materials."

The President acknowledged that in this country there are many individuals of vast wealth, but this situation, he said, will continue "so long as men are free and enterprise and ambition exist."

BILLIONS OF INVESTORS.

"The millions of our people who are investors in securities, the $27,000,000,000 of deposits in savings institutions, which were more than doubled in nine years, the $7,200,000,000 of assets of building and loan associations, which have more than trebled since 1919, the widespread individual ownership of homesteads, the possession of 23,000,000 motor vehicles, of which 20,000,000 are passenger cars, the general use of the telephone and radio, the constantly increasing rate of wages even when the price of commodities has been declining, and the general standard of living never before experienced by any people in human history, all testify that under free institutions and equality of opportunity the distribution of wealth is solving itself in accordance with natural laws," he said.

Dealing with the growth of the South since the Civil War, the President found much of which to boast.

WEALTH OF THE SOUTH.

"In the Southern states alone the wealth, the manufactures, the mineral, and the farm products, the banking resources, and the exports are of about the same value today that they were in the whole United States in 1900," he pointed out. "The yearly production of the farms, the mines, and the mills exceeds $19,000,000,000, while construction contracts run about $1,000,000,000."

Inland waterways likewise were touched upon.

"Our national expenditures and authorizations for inland waterways have run into hundreds of millions of dollars," he declared. "Some of this in the Mississippi Valley has already been demonstrated to be commercially profitable. The waterborne traffic on the Great Lakes has reached the enormous total of 116,000,000 tons in a single season. Plans are being made for a deep channel-waterway from the Great Lakes to the sea."

President Coolidge came to Fredericksburg by special train this afternoon from Washington, and planned to return this evening.

that she failed in an attempt to board a train to Boston and, slipping beneath the wheels of the last coach.

Murray was killed before the eyes of a playmate Roberta Parks of Orchard st., West Lynn. Police said that both boys went to the freight yard during school recess.

The body of Miss Dexter was discovered by Freight Clerk James Dooling of the Malden station, after the train due in Boston at 8:09 had left the station.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dexter, parents of the dead girl, were notified of the tragedy while they were in New Bedford conferring with Lemuel Le Baron Dexter, lawyer and relative, in connection with settlement of the estate of William Rogers of Mattapoisett, of which Louis Dexter is an heir.

HOOVER LEAPS TO FRONT IN WISCONSIN, STRAW VOTE SHOWS

SMITH REVEALED AS TRAILING IN LATEST TABULATION

By CHARLES N. WHEELER
Noted Political Analyst

Chicago, Oct. 19—Wisconsin, the outstanding see-saw state of "bolts and nuts," as Sam Blythe puts it, today shows a trend to Hoover.

A week ago Governor Smith leaped into the lead and held it, though by a narrow margin, until the last batch of figures in the Hearst nationwide poll arrived.

The tabulation now stands:

	Hoover	Smith
Men	10,351	11,218
Women	9,099	8,253
Total	19,450	19,471
Hoover lead	29

Hoover has a lead of 846 in the women's column, while Smith's "men lead" is 919.

LEADS IN MILWAUKEE

It is in Milwaukee that Smith is going to register his largest lead over Hoover, particularly with the men's vote. As the poll is extended not into the State, however, the percentage of women votes steadily increases for Hoover.

At the same time there is a slight recession in the Smith men's vote percentage.

All other polls taken up to this time, particularly that by the Literary Digest, give the State to Hoover by from 30,000 to 170,000.

Last week's Digest percentages divided 13.5 for Hoover to 41.5 for Smith. These probably will draw more closely together as the Digest's returns come in more fully from Milwaukee.

The total vote in the State four years ago was 840,000. An increase of perhaps 20 per cent, may be registered in the voting on November 6 which would bring the State total up to approximately 1,000,000 votes.

MARGIN NARROW

Computed on the Digest a percentages of last week, the division would be:

Hoover	585,000
Smith	415,000
Hoover lead	170,000

Computed on the percentages indicated in the Hearst poll today Hoover would carry the State by an eye-lash lead.

What seems to be developing in Wisconsin is a pro-Hoover reaction to the bolt by Senator Blaine and State Chairman Herman L. Ekern of the La Follette faction, and the refusal of Senator La Follette himself to say a word of approval for the Republican candidate, although all three leaders hold their positions in politics as Republicans, and under the primary law.

The situation has been further aggravated by the flop of the Madison Times, the La Follette champion, to Smith while still supporting the La Follette candidates on the State ticket below Kohler, the Republican candidate for governor.

The Times has also bolted Kohler for the Democratic candidate. In the recent primary Kohler defeated Congressman Beck, the La Follette candidate.

ANALYSIS MADE

Much has been written concerning the mechanics of bolting in the Badger State and its effect on the approaching election.

One of the clearest analysis of this aspect of the Wisconsin situation that has come to our notice, because dispassionate and without bias apparently, was clicked off by Winter Everett, political editor of the Wisconsin State Journal at Madison.

Here's his picture of what it's all about in the La Follette territory:

"Quite a number of the Blaine-La Follette leaders are wondering if there has not been too much bolting in this campaign. They are beginning to figure what the aftermath will be.

"They are not so disturbed as to the effect on the 1928 campaign as they are in regard to the future status of Senator Robert M. La Follette and Senator John J. Blaine as Republicans.

"Now that the bolt is an actuality, some of the Blaine-La Follette leaders are beginning to wonder what the harvest will be. They want to remain Republican.

DOUBT POSITION

"They do not want a permanent Democratic badge. They desire future Republican recognition. The Republicans more often control national politics than the Democrats. More than this, under all ordinary circumstances the Wisconsin voters lean to Republican ideas.

"The Blaine-La Follette leaders are aware of this situation. They want to retain a Republican standard and they are doing a heap of thinking at the present time as to whether they have not kicked just a little too high and if the reaction which comes in 1930 and 1932 will not have a recoil which will not be an aid to the future political ideas of Senators La Follette and Blaine.

"There is a great deal of talk of this kind among the Blaine-La Follette leaders and a lot of whispering that both John and Robert have stepped a little too far."

RASKOB WIRES WORK TO STOP

New York, Oct. 19 (AP)—John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman, in a telegram today to Dr. Hubert Work, Republican national chairman, called upon him to prevent further "deliberate and willful misrepresentation by Republican campaign speakers of the immigration stand of Governor Smith."

The Democratic chairman said the telegram was prompted by statistics furnished by Harry E. Hull, commissioner general of immigration, in an attempt to show that Smith's proposal would result in a 46 per cent increase in immigration. Raskob, said Smith is opposed to any increase in immigration, but agrees with Mr. Hoover that the harsh provisions in the present law, which separate families, should be modified.

LADY ASTOR IN GOLF MATCH

Lady Nancy Astor, American-born member of the British Parliament, forgot her cares today and devoted her time to recreation.

In the morning she played golf with the party of Nathaniel Greene of Commonwealth ave., who called for her at the Ritz Carlton at 9:30.

At 1:20 the Greene car drew up in front of the hotel again, and the distinguished British peeress actually skipped across the sidewalk, danced across the lobby and flew upstairs, cheeks flushed and hair blowing from beneath her blue felt hat.

In five minutes, still wearing her sport costume of navy blue tweed with white blouse and heavy tan brogues, Lady Astor raced through the lobby again and bounded into the Greene car, explaining en route that she was already 15 minutes late for a luncheon at the Greene home.

In the late afternoon she motored down to the Bayard Tuckermans at Hamilton, where she is to spend the week-end.

LAW ENFORCEMENT HEAD HITS AT SMITH

Speaking at the open forum of the Old South Meeting House, Mrs. William Tilton, Cambridge, woman member of the Women's National Committee for Law Enforcement, declared Governor Smith if elected could not bring back real beer. She said the Volstead Act could be modified only by a wet Congress and a changed Supreme Court, and neither of these necessities exists. Furthermore, she said a flood tide of beer would not sweep temperance into the country.

The speaker added that Governor Smith's second proposal, a constitutional amendment allowing states that so wish to have every sort of liquor under state control, is also impossible of achievement, as it would take a two-thirds' vote of Congress and 36 states.

"I declare Governor Smith's reforms no reforms," she said, "his solution no solution. I beg the people of this state to use their heads, not Tammany's headlines, if they really desire to bring about an era of real temperance."

HOOVER TO SUM UP CAMPAIGN IN N. Y. SPEECH

Washington, Oct. 19 (AP)—The final thrust Herbert Hoover is to make into eastern territory—his visit to New York city next Monday—is to be much less strenuous than the campaign tours he has made during the last month.

Street processions and long automobile touring through crowds, which formed a large part of his activities on his journey to Newark, Elizabethton and Boston, have been eliminated, as have rear platform speeches and overnight train rides.

The Republican presidential candidate will leave here Sunday afternoon, arriving in New York in time to have a good night's rest. He will be welcomed to the metropolis by Charles D. Hilles, national committeeman for New York; H. Edmund Machold, State chairman, and other leaders.

Under present plans all of Monday will be spent at the hotel. Some party leaders will be guests of the candidate at breakfast. Later Hoover will receive delegations from various foreign groups and probably will make brief talks to them.

The nominee will speak again at the hotel luncheon for State and county chairmen and officers of the various independent Hoover-Curtis committees in New York. Several hundred will attend this luncheon and the candidate is expected to advise them to redouble their efforts in the fight to capture Governor Smith's home State for the Republican national ticket.

During the afternoon the nominee will receive Republican service men who have been promoting his candidacy and later will rest before dinner and the speech he is to deliver at Madison Sq. Garden that night. Vice-President Charles G. Dawes also is to speak on the same program, which will be carried to the country over a nation-wide radio hookup.

Hoover will spend Monday night in New York and return to Washington Tuesday afternoon to conduct a "front porch" campaign at his headquarters.

In the New York address Hoover is expected to make a general summing up of his position on the various issues which he has talked about.

GOODWIN WILL PRESIDE AT G. O. P. RALLY

Former Registrar Frank A. Goodwin will make his first speech of the campaign Saturday night in Mechanics Hall, Worcester.

The fiery ex-state official, who polled more than 170,000 votes in the primary, will preside at the rally and introduce Lieut.-Gov. Frank G. Allen, the man who won from him the nomination for governor.

Until a few days ago, when he announced he would support the entire Republican ticket, Goodwin had the G. O. P. chieftains continually on the anxious seat.

At the Worcester rally, other speakers will include Benjamin Loring Young, Republican nominee for United States senator, and Joseph Scott, Los Angeles lawyer and prominent Knights of Columbus member.

Believing in the open-door policy and that the people are entitled to know what is going on in G. O. P. inner circles, Louis K. Liggett, Republican National Committeeman from Massachusetts, will start Monday to hold daily conferences with newspapermen.

The Massachusetts Women's Committee for Hoover today announced that Mrs. Oscar C. Gallagher, prominent Brookline social service worker, and former president of the Unitarian Women's Alliance, will vote for Hoover.

The committee quotes Mrs. Gallagher as saying she is impressed by Hoover's knowledge of practical business conditions in the United states, and his understanding of the business relations between American business and world commerce.

Mrs. Gallagher was one of seven educational and social workers to declare for Hoover during the day. The others were: Lillian M. Brown of the Brookline Friendly Society; Elizabeth L. Holbrook of the Family Welfare Society of Boston; Ada L. Sheffield of Cambridge; Elizabeth J. Woodward of the Woodward school; Mrs. Margaret J. Stannard, director, and Mrs. Gladys Beckett Jones, assistant director, of the Garland school for homemaking.

If Benjamin Loring Young, Republican nominee for U. S. Senator, is a "shadow boxer" in respect to the tariff question, then his opponent, Senator David I. Walsh, is the "champion shadow boxer," it was asserted by Young today at the daily Republican rally in the old Adams House.

The Republican nominee charged that Senator Walsh has refused to answer questions asked by Young on the tariff.

"It is apparent," said Young, "that Senator Walsh finds little comfort in the discussion of real issues.

"Senator Walsh shows surprise that anyone should question his judgment. He has declared that the tariff issue smells of mothballs and that I was firing off a popgun and indulging in shadow boxing.

"Now, I don't know for certain what he means by shadow boxing, but I assume he means raising false issues for the purpose of getting votes and not for reasons of sincere conviction.

"If that is what shadow boxing means, then I hand Senator Walsh the championship belt, because he has proved himself a master of the art."

At the Scollay sq. Republican rally in Cobb's Tea House, speakers included Maj. Judson Hannigan and former Mayor William E. Weeks of Everett.

BAILS OUT LYNN GIRL HE SAYS 'ANNOYS HIM'

"Bothered," he said, by the attentions of a pretty girl in her twenties, who claims to be his fiancee, Joseph Hennessy, 38, of Jefferson st., Lynn, today sought justice in Lynn District Court where he appeared as complainant against Miss Margaret Joy, 28, of Union st., Lynn.

When charged with disorderly conduct, Miss Joy pleaded not guilty and displaying a ring of the engagement type, declared she had the right to accost Hennessy.

"Mr. Hennessy promised to marry me and I was only stopping him to remind him of his promise," she told Judge Ralph W. Reeve.

She told the court that Hennessy is no stranger to her and that he took her on a trip through the South.

The case was continued until Oct. 24.

And then Hennessy bailed her out.

Ed's Government Job Good for Another Year

Edward Fitzgerald "of Boston," renamed his "job with the Government" today, after he indignantly denied to Judge Zottoli in municipal court that he was a vagrant.

"I haven't been around here for three years," he told the court. "I've been working for the Government."

Then Probation Officer McDonnell stepped into the breach and queried, "Don't you mean your job with the Government was as a prisoner at Long Island?"

"Yes, but I worked, and worked plenty. And isn't that working for the Government?"

"Your job is transferred to the House of Correction for one month," the court said.

REVEAL BIG CREDITORS IN ENWRIGHT CASE

Salem, Oct. 19 (AP)—A schedule of the assets and liabilities of Frederick W. Enwright, former Boston and New York newspaper publisher, showed a long list of creditors when it was made public today.

The creditors included the executors of the will of William A. Gaston, former Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, $120,000; James P. Phelan of Lynn, $250,000; Blair & Company of New York, $50,000, and Jefferson Livingston of New York, $156,770.

BOSTON BANKER DYING IN PLANE DISASTER

His skull crushed, Pliny Jewell at Milton, Harvard man and vice-president of Coffin & Burr, Inc., a bond firm, of 60 State st., today was reported in a critical condition following the crash of a Junkers airplane in Atlantic City, in which one person was killed and seven others injured.

George King, pilot, today denied that a terrified passenger grabbed the control stick and sent the plane crashing to the ground as had been first reported.

JEWELL UNDER KNIFE

Jewell has been rushed to the operating room in a last effort to save his life. His wife, a daughter and a son are at his bedside.

William Octave Chanute of Denver died of a fractured skull two hours after the crash.

"I banked the plane as I was coming down and it went into a tail spin," King told authorities. "At an altitude of 700 feet it was impossible to bring the ship out of the spin. I can't explain why it went into the spin.

"Perhaps if I had retarded the throttle at the beginning of the spin we would have come out. There was nothing wrong with the plane, it was just terribly unfortunate. Mr. Chanute was sitting next to me at the other controls, but he did not touch anything. With the plane falling, I would not have blamed him if he had, being unaccustomed to flying, but he kept his nerve and sat there without making a move toward the controls."

THOSE INJURED

The others injured in Atlantic City Hospital, in addition to Jewell and Pilot King, are:

Ferdinand Ehle of Pleasantville, N. J., relief pilot, possible fracture of right leg and shock.

FORMER NEWSPAPERMAN

Jewell is well known. He is 51 years old and for a number of years made his home in Concord. He has been interested in Boston University and is a trustee and member of the executive committee of the university and also of the committee of the College of Business Administration.

He has been a member of the board of managers of the Children's Hospital and treasurer of the executive committee of the Union Club.

He was graduated from Harvard in 1899. He became a newspaper reporter, later ran a country weekly, the Bridgewater Independent, and then entered the banking world. During the war he did considerable work for the Red Cross, Liberty Loan and other like committees.

He has two children, a son, Pliny, Jr., of the class of 1931 at Harvard, and a daughter. Mrs. Jewell is the former Anne Winslow Harris of East Bridgewater.

Plane Tragedy Brings Bank Convention to Sudden End

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 19 (AP)—Overshadowed by tragedy, the convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America was brought to a sudden close at the Ambassador Hotel today.

A resolution of sympathies over the death of W. Octave Chanute, of Denver, Colo., was adopted as the final act of the gathering. Chanute, a prominent member of the association lost his life in an aeroplane crash in which four other investment bankers were injured.

Rollin A. Wilbur, of Cleveland, newly-elected president succeeding Henry R. Hayes, of New York, adjourned the convention within ten minutes after the opening of its final session with the words:

"I have nothing to say, except words of sympathy."

PROSECUTOR HAS FULL DATA IN OBREGON CASE

Mexico City, Oct. 19 (AP)—All the facts and developments having to do with the assassination of President-elect Obregon are now in the hands of the federal prosecutor in the form of a voluminous report. They have been turned over to the prosecutor by Judge Aznar Mendoni, of the court of first instance, San Angel, before whom the case against those implicated in the assassination was heard.

Jose de Leon-Toral, Mother Superior Conception, and eleven others are involved, the former being charged directly with the murder.

Worcester, Oct. 19 (AP)—Richard Healy, Worcester and Albany merchant, left an estate of almost $1,000,000 according to estimate filed in the Probate Court on bonds of Attorney John F. McGrath and Arthur J. McGrail, executors of his will.

Mr. Healy in his will made bequests of about $200,000, including over $100,000 to charitable and religious organizations.

SINCLAIR TAX EXTORTION CASE JURY DISAGREES

New York, Oct. 19 (AP)—The Federal Jury which heard the Government's charge that Edward F. Brown and Elmer F. Andrews, internal revenue agents, attempted to extort $37,500 bribe to permit a deduction from the income tax of Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, was discharged today when it was unable to agree on a verdict. Judge Thomas D. Thatcher released the defendants on bail pending a new trial.

YALE STUDENT JAILED IN FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

New Haven Ct., Oct. 19 (AP)—Frederick Guion Bull, a junior student at Yale, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was fined $1000 and given a three months' suspended sentence in Superior Court today for misuse of a motor vehicle. He was found guilty in causing the death of Mrs. Mary Morton, 51, of Whitneyville, as she was about to board a trolley car on April 26.

BOY FINED FOR FALSE ALARM IN PAPER FIRE

A plea that a paper fire in the gutter of West Cottage st., Roxbury, was the cause for a fire alarm failed to convince Judge Palmer in Roxbury court today that John Maginnis, 17, of Julian st., Roxbury, was innocent of sounding a false alarm.

Maginnis was fined $10 and appealed. His attorney contended that two boys lighted a fire in the gutter just before the alarm was sounded.

FORD IS MOVING TRACTOR PLANT TO IRELAND

Detroit, Oct. 19 (AP)—The Ford Motor Company plans to move its main Fordson tractor plant to Cork, Ire., it was learned today. Machinery is being moved from the Fordson plant near Detroit and shipped to Cork to be reassembled and put into operation by Jan. 1, it was announced. Manufacture of tractors at Fordson was discontinued a year ago to allow more space for the manufacture of the new model Fords.

Another reason given for the change was that European demands for tractors had so materially increased that the Cork plant was unable to fill them. These orders, Ford officials explained, came principally from England, Ireland, Germany and Russia.

Approximately 80 per cent of the tractor making machinery and equipment is being removed to Cork in Ford vessels. When the machinery is installed in Cork, that plant is to be operated on a basis of two 8-hour shifts a day, turning out approximately 300 tractors daily, it was announced.

Ford officials said the Russian Soviet government recently placed an order for $1,000,000 worth of tractors.

TO SERVE 300,000 PEOPLE

Hundreds of people today crowded the new Summerfield's store, the first of a series of branches to cover New England. The store has 25,000 feet of daylight space and equipped to handle the trade from Malden, Cambridge, Medford, Waltham and Everett.

WIFE CHARGES FRAUD IN DOCTOR'S DIVORCE

Alleging fraud and falsification, Mrs. Ildegenda Morelli, formerly of Cottamiarda, Italy, but now of Boston, filed a petition in Suffolk Probate Court today, for revocation of a divorce decree granted her husband, Dr. Luigi C. Morelli of Hanover st., in July, 1926. According to her position, acts of cruelty alleged by Dr. Morelli would have been outside Massachusetts jurisdiction had they occurred. She contends the birth of their son is given as November 9, 1905, nearly five years before the doctor said he was married and nearly 10 years before the actual date of marriage, August 11, 1915.

'BROWN DERBY' WOMEN ATTEND SMITH RALLY

The Democratic brown derby vogue spread to the fair sex today when two Swampscott women backing Al Smith appeared in the front row at the noonday rally at Young's Hotel wearing this type of mannish "head-piece."

The women are Mrs. George W. Deshon and Mrs. Everett L. Burt, both of whom said they intended to wear the derbies regularly until election day, to help Smith cause, and after election to celebrate his victory.

The big crowd, which overflowed into Court st., where traffic was cut off by official order between 1 and 2, was given another chance to laugh and cheer when Ex-Curley organization sent out a "sandwich man" with a lantern and a placard reading: "I am Diogenes, looking for Hoover prosperity."

CURLE VRETORTS TO SCOTT

Former Mayor James M. Curley made sarcastic reply to Joseph Scott of Los Angeles, prominent Catholic layman, who, besides attacking Democrats on intolerance, had sharply criticized Curley in speeches in the east.

"Judging by newspaper accounts, a personage here from California has the idea that James M. Curley is running for President and not Alfred E. Smith," said Curley.

"As a matter of fact, I assure you I am not a candidate for the presidency but am doing what I can to elect Governor Smith, believing that his election means more to the people of the United States than the election of his opponent."

NOT HUNGRY "INSECTS."

"When you are out hunting elephants, you don't bother with insects."

Mrs. Helen Talboy, author and lecturer, of New York, told her audience that she had always in the past considered herself an independent but now was a member of the Democratic party if that party would have her.

Edward M. Sullivan, Thomas D. Lavelle, Councillor Michael J. Mahoney, Congressman Joseph A. Conry, Representative-elect John P. Connolly and Charles B. Strecker were other speakers.

GEORGIANS PROTEST RACE ISSUE IN CAMPAIGN

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 19 (AP)—University presidents, ministers, business leaders and others prominent in the life of the South joined today in voicing protest against "injection of the race question into the present political campaign." In a statement bearing signatures of 45 men and women it was asserted that the declaration was intended to be entirely non-partisan, and that the race issue had been raised "by partisans of both sides, who for the purpose of driving voters into their respective camps are, in our judgment, reopening the healing wounds of bitterness and hate."

DUKE OF GLOUCESTER IS "HEAP BIG HUNTER"

Nairobi, Kenya, British East Africa, Oct. 19 (AP)—The hunting trip of the Duke of Gloucester, younger brother of the Prince of Wales, is meeting with great success, says a message received today.

The duke himself brought down what was described as a "world record specimen" of a fringe-eared oryx, or African antelope.

RIVAL TONGS MOVE HERE TO END WARFARE

Warring factions of the rival Chinese tongs in Boston today took independent steps to halt the dissension which, since Tuesday, has claimed the toll of two lives and spread terror among the ranks of Chinamen throughout the metropolitan district.

Following an informal conference with leading Chinese merchants, Capt. Herbert W. Goodwin of the Lagrange st. station announced that they had informed him that representatives of both rivals, the Hip Sings and On Leong Tong, had left for New York to call an armistice conference.

In the latter city the death of On Chong, laundryman, in Harlem Hospital today, marked the second murder that may be laid to the tong feud.

Last night, while Chong was working in his shop on Eighth ave., another Chinese walked in, shot Crong and disappeared.

Ching Ott Ming, 33, proprietor of a laundry on the same street, was arrested shortly after Chong's death today not far from the scene of the shooting. He was placed in jail on charges of homicide.

The cessation of business in the heart of Chinatown since the tong war began moved the Merchants' Association of the district to exert their influence towards a truce, according to Capt. Goodwin, and they assured him the Boston deputation sent to New York earnestly desire a return of peace to their Boston community.

The announcement of Capt. Goodwin came rapidly on the heels of a report from Pittsburgh and Chicago that opposing tong leaders in those cities had called a halt to the spreading wave of internecine warfare.

Despite these reassuring promises of truce, however, a cordon of police still guarded Boston's Canton town closely today and there has been no relaxation in their efforts to round up Chinese gunmen illegal to have been imported to carry out the edicts of the tongs.

Chinese laundries in Greater Boston again also were under extra guard by fellow members of their race, recruited from the Chinatown business district, and this exodus of volunteer guards, crippling the commercial life of the local Chinese trade, is believed to have given momentum to the merchants' independent move for tong peace.

45,000 AUTO OWNERS FACE BIG INSURANCE ASSESSMENT

They were revealed at a special investigation made by state examiners following persistent complaints.

Policy holders and newspapermen were told at the office of the insurance commissioner that the investigation was "still in process," despite the fact that a special report had been submitted as early as Aug. 1 and was then in the hands of officials of the company and on file at the commissioner's office.

Heavy Losses

A statement issued this afternoon from the office of the state insurance commissioner after the Boston Evening American had issued the story cited that the annual report of the Car Owners Mutual Company for the period ending December 31, 1927, showed the insured losses at $171,151.42 but that policyholders from the commissioner's office reported that the figure should have been $261,104.37.

The report showed the premium income of the company for that year to have been $650,210.16 and of this amount $5,[illegible] was from premiums received from automobile liabilities and $105,564.28 property damage.

The company reported assets amounting to $302,003.50, but the auditors reported only liabilities, amounting to $334,757.91.

Acting Commissioner Arthur E. Linnell admitted today that a complete examination of the books of the company was under way by auditors who are working night and day. He said he expected the examination to be completed within a few days.

The charge is openly made in insurance circles that a "smoke screen" was purposely thrown at the State House for "political expediency" in order to let the matter ride until after election. Meanwhile the thousands of policyholders were kept ignorant of the real state of affairs which affected them so vitally.

The situation is reported to be one of the most acrimonious compulsory automobile insurance went into effect in Massachusetts.

Blame High Salaries

High salaries and extravagant overhead are said to have contributed to the situation. The plight of the Car Owners' Mutual is reported to have been a major factor in the recent insurance rate hearings which resulted in the resignation of Commissioner Wesley E. Monk.

The special investigation, still cloaked in the strictest secrecy, lasted weeks. The report of this investigation covers more than 15 typewritten pages. It is signed by Leslie M. Parker, one of the State examiners.

The following is an excerpt from the official report, dated Aug. 1, 1928:

"The result of the investigation has shown that the company's 1927 experience caused it to enter the current year of business [illegible] with a deficit of at least $94,777.44. As a result of [illegible] during May 31, 1928, a deficit of $440,590.02 has been created.

Deficit Assured

"This figure is based on the company's estimate for pending [illegible] claims and the examination figure for the 1927 cases still outstanding. The full effect of the 50 per cent acquisition cost is reflected at this time.

"Under present operating conditions it will be impossible for the company to show anything but a deficit. Its loss experience on liability business for the year 1927 was 78 per cent (that assumed in the rate 50). This acquisition cost is now 50 per cent.

"Even though it could settle its losses within the figures assumed in the rate its dollar of premium is entirely used in losses and acquisition expenses. Its obligation for taxes, home office salary, rental, dues, rents, departmental fees and other overhead expenses which have been in excess of those allowed in the rate will approximate an additional 12 to 14 per cent. Under such conditions it never can hope to overcome the present deficit and build up a surplus.

After New Business

"A conservative statement of the estimated earnings, losses and expenses based on an estimated earned premium of $1,125,000 and amounts already paid and the present expense schedule indicates that the company will end the year 1928 with a deficit of approximately $140,000. Should the loss expenses measure that experienced in 1927 the deficit will exceed $700,000 (Aug. 1, 1928)."

In spite of the involved status of the company, as shown by the report of the state insurance department, it was pointed out today that the company has issued circulars in its campaign for 1929 policies. A circular dated Sept. 27, 1928, contains this paragraph:

"Our company has made plans contingent upon what rates are established, one plan based upon rates as promulgated by the insurance commissioner, but not filed, and a second plan in the event the old rates hold over, which plans cannot be released until decision has been handed down by the Supreme Court."

A circular dated Sept. 12, 1928, reads in part:

"At the start of 1928 we set our goal at $1,250,000 in premiums and we have fallen short of this amount by a very small margin, which we believe will be overcome within the next four months. Our goal was reached in having passed the million dollar mark in liability premiums.

Stresses Loyalty

"With this tremendous increase over 1927 proving without doubt the public approval of our time payment plan and the writing of compulsory insurance business at cost, we can only look forward to 1929 with the greatest optimism in reaching not less than 60,000 policyholders with a premium income of $1,750,000.

"The Car Owners' organization day by day is becoming more and more a unit due to LOYALTY on the part of our agency organization. The greatest quality in man is LOYALTY. With LOYALTY there is safety and progress. LOYALTY does not run—it sticks—and that is the position of the Car Owners and those associated with it. With this NOBLE WORD before us let's carry on."

Is "Winked At"

The Car Owners' Mutual Insurance Company was created on new premises. It was the first company in the state to sell insurance virtually on installments, on what is known as the time payment plan without interest. The State Insurance Department is said in insurance circles to have "winked" in permitting this departure.

In August of 1926, the proposed company was authorized by the State insurance commissioner to set to work about procuring a charter and write business. The charter was granted in October, 1926.

Agents' Agreement

Licenses for agents were procured. The agents solicited business on applications which ran something as follows.

"We, the undersigned, subscribe (usually $5) for auto compulsory insurance premium at the rates to be promulgated by the commissioner of insurance in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in the —— Company, when that company is chartered to write business in the State of Massachusetts."

The company actually solicited business and accepted subscriptions before it was chartered, according to the admission of employes. This was another unusual privilege granted by the State Insurance Department, it is charged.

Had No Capital

Agents were recruited from every walk of life, clerks, mechanics, auto salesmen, garage men and others, instead of the usual solicitors with insurance experience.

Because of the time payment plan and the size and alertness of the organization of agents, the company jumped to fourth highest in the state for premiums written in 1927, approximately $1,250,000 and with 46,000 policy holders enrolled.

There are two types of mutual companies, those that pay no commissions to producers and those that do. The Car Owners is in the latter group.

There is no capital in a mutual company other than that subscribed by policy holders who on the mutual plan agree to tide over deficits by paying assessments.

The report was received here by Mrs. Ruth W. Atkinson, executive director of the local Welfare League. The report estimated the number of lives lost at 2000 with no possibility of an accurate check and said that 22 counties were affected, seven seriously. Ninety-five per cent of the buildings in Palm Beach county were damaged.

URGE STANDARD TRAFFIC RULES FOR NATION

Pittsburgh, Oct. 19 (AP)—Standard traffic control in American cities was recommended today at the meeting of the administrative board of the American Engineering Council. Eighty-three recommendations for attaining a standard system were contained in a report of the committee on street traffic signs, signals and markings.

The commitee, headed by W. B. Powell of Buffalo, N. Y., announced that its report was the result of a survey conducted in 35 States and more than 100 cities having a total population of more than 27,000,000.

The report said that cities were engineering traffic control by employing wrong practices, adding that "it is clearly obvious that some cities are making two fundamental errors in installing street traffic signs, signals and markings."

One error being committed, the report stated, is the placing of traffic control devices without adequate study of conditions which their use is intended to improve, or of the evil effects produced at some intersections resulting from the attempt to correct undesirable conditions at one particular intersection.

Employing traffic control devices at places and times not justified by the conditions was pointed out as the second error.

W. C. T. U. HEAD OPPOSES "RASKOB AS TREASURER"

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Ida B. Wise, vice president of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union in a statement today expressed the belief that Governor Alfred E. Smith, if elected President, would appoint John J. Raskob, "the leading anti-prohibitionist now connected with the wet campaign," as Secretary of the Treasury. The prohibition department is a unit of the Treasury Department.

New York's Budget

New York, Oct. 19—The largest city in the United States has the largest budget in its history mapped out for 1929. The board of estimate today approved a tentative budget of $534,958,827.14, an increase of more than $36,000,000.

JAIL MAN FOR ATTACKING MISS COX

Six months in Charles street jail is the penalty imposed on Frank Rourke, 35, married, of Pinehurst st., Acolindale, for his attack on Miss Dorothy Cox, 21, daughter of Judge Louis A. Cox and niece of ex-Governor Channing H. Cox.

The sentence was meted out yesterday to Rourke in Superior Court but it did not become known until today.

Rourke, under indictment had pleaded guilty to so much of the indictment as charged assault and battery on the girl. The indictment also charged intent to commit a criminal attack which was waived.

The assault and battery took place on the night of September 24 in a lonely spot off Gardner st., West Roxbury, near the Charles River.

Patrolman Jesse Warmes of the West Roxbury station heard a girl's screams and raced toward a car parked in Gardner st.

When he reached the spot, it is alleged that he found the girl struggling with Rourke, in whose car she admitted having been a passenger.

Wife Slayer Jokes in Chair, Aids His Executioner

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 19 (INS)—Protesting his innocence Frank Sharp, 35, business man, seated himself in the electric chair of the penitentiary today and paid with his life for killing his wife in 1926.

"I am innocent but I am ready to go," were Sharp's last words.

He walked to the chair without a quiver and assisted the executioner to adjust the straps, joking with him during the process. Sharp was twice convicted of murdering his wife.

MILLIONS POOL PROFIT BARED

New York, Oct. 19 (AP)—Trial of William J. Pringle, secretary-treasurer of the C. C. and B. M. A. baseball and stock market pool, better known as the Albany pool, began today before Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher and a jury.

Four federal indictments are standing against Pringle in this district. He was called for trial on two, which were consolidated. Three charge "use of the mails in the promotion of a pool or a scheme similar to a lottery," and with conspiracy to use the mails.

U. S. Atty Charles H. Tuttle who with Thomas T. Cooke, an assistant is representing the government, told the jury that the pool had operated for about five years, earning profits of more than $1,000,000 annually and distributing prizes of $75,000 a week.

The jury was selected quickly though several of the talesmen admitted acquaintance with John J. Fogarty, mayor of Yonkers, who before he became mayor was attorney for Pringle.

MILLS STRIKES BACK AT SMITH

Washington, Oct. 19 (AP)—Under Secretary Mills, in the temporary absence of Secretary Mellon, took up the task today of continuing the treasury debate over government finances with Governor Smith. He issued a statement dealing further with Smith's charge that Government expenditures have been increasing.

"Governor Smith refuses to confine himself to the record as made," the Mills statement said, "and, when his statements of fact are directly challenged simply reasserts them without supporting proof.

"As a sample of Governor Smith's ignoring the facts, he makes a sweeping assertion. 'There is not a single department of the federal government that shows a decrease as between 1924 and 1928.' The fact is the three departments show decreases.

As to his charge that there was an increase in 1927 of $300,000,000 for miscellaneous, I repeat what the secretary said, there was no such increase, and far from showing an increase, total government expenditures show a decrease in 1927 as compared with 1924.

HOPE IS FADING FOR LONE FLIER

pessimistic regarding the airman's fate, saying there were only two slight possibilities now—that he had alighted on some rocks inland off the west coast of Scotland or had been picked up by a boat unequipped with wireless.

Another sight of anxious vigil was spent by the flier's wife and she still clung to slight possibilities as hopes.

Only once had MacDonald been reported since he left Harbor Grace, N. F., Wednesday at 11:51 a. m., eastern standard time.

The Dutch steamship Hardenberg reported sighting of an airplane at 7:30 p. m., eastern standard time, Wednesday, far north of MacDonald's course. The position given was 700 miles east and north of Harbor Grace and the airman had then some 1200 miles to fly to reach Ireland.

The message came after 25 hours of complete silence and Mrs. MacDonald voiced its ominous import when she remarked:

"That is a long time ago."

Generally conditions at sea had been regarded as favorable for MacDonald's flight. When the French liner Paris reached Plymouth this morning the captain said visibility had been good for 30 hours, but that he had seen nothing of the plane. Yesterday morning, when the airman's coming was awaited in Ireland, the weather was unfavorable there.

Had he been forced down on the Atlantic by the failure of his motor or ice forming on the wings of the plane, it was thought that MacDonald would have been able to keep aloft not more than 20 minutes by partly empty gasoline tanks. He had no wireless and in that brief span of time could only send up flares in the slim hope that some vessel might come to his aid.

Doubt Blast at Sea Was MacDonald's Plane

Steamship Mirach, Oct. 19 (AP)—(By radio to the Associated Press)—The Mirach sighted at 11:30 p. m., Greenwich meridian time, Wednesday night (6:30 p. m. eastern standard time), at latitude 53.30 north, longitude 43.42 west, in bearing 130 true, at a big distance lights most probably resembling an explosion.

The position given by the Mirach is about 550 miles east of Belle Isle, Newfoundland, and along the course which Lieut.-Comdr. H. C. MacDonald was flying when sighted by the steamship Hardenberg at 7:30 p. m., eastern standard time, Wednesday night, 150 miles farther east.

Since the Hardenberg reported that the airplane passed an hour later than the time given by the Mirach for sighting lights it seems improbable that the Mirach has evidence of a disaster to MacDonald's plane.

18 Perished in Trying to Fly Over Atlantic

New York, Oct. 19 (AP)—Prior to Lieut.-Commander H. C. MacDonald's flight 18 persons had lost their lives in attempts to cross the Atlantic ocean by air. They were:

Capt. St. Roman, a French officer, and Commander Mouneyres, started from St. Louis, Senegal, May 5, 1927, for Buenos Aires and never heard from again.

Capt. Charles Nungesser and Francis Coli, French, lost their lives trying to fly from France to America the same month.

On August 31, 1927, Capt Leslie Hamilton, Col. Frederick F. Minchin and Princess Loewenstein-Wertheim took off from Upavon, England, in the St. Raphael for Ottowa and disappeared.

Lloyd W. Bertaud, James Hill and Phillip Payne, Americans perished when they flew from Old Orchard, Me., on September 6, 1927, for London, England.

Capt. Terry Tully and Lieut. James Medcalf were lost after leaving London, Ont., September 7, 1927, for London, England.

Mrs. Frances Grayson, in the Bluebird, left Roosevelt Field, N. Y., with three companions—Oskar Omdal, Dirke Goldsborough and Fred Koehler—for a flight to Newfoundland en route across the Atlantic and were lost off Newfoundland.

WANT GAG RULE FOR HUNGARY

Budapest, Hungary, Oct 19 (AP)—Under a bill introduced by the government today, the Premier and President of the House are vested with the power of vetoing all speeches in Parliament which, in their judgment, are prejudicial to the best interests of the country, or derogatory to the reputation of the government. Newspapers attempting to publish such speeches would be punished.

Opponents of the measure characterize it as a medieval retrogressive gag rule unworthy of a modern representative assembly, while government supporters declare it provides an effective check against publication or preservation of any pronouncement directed against the good name of the country or integrity of the government. Adoption is regarded as certain.

SPORTSMAN'S CLUB ELECTS MORGAN HEAD

Keene, N. H., Oct. 19—Ralph L. Morgan of Richmond was elected president of the New Hampshire Sportsman's Club at the annual meeting held at the Keene Country Club. The other officers elected are: Fred T. Cummings of Troy, vice-president; Alexander S. Thompson of Swanzey, secretary; Edward J. Costello of Winchester, treasurer. George W. S. Platte of Keene was toastmaster at the banquet preceding the business session.

BOSTON POLICE EXPERT SEEKS HOPPE AWARD

A Boston policeman today made application for a share in the rewards offered for arrest and conviction of Stephen J. Hoppe, who is serving a life sentence for slaying Patrolman Alfred N. Hollis of Quincy.

Inspector Warren Liess of Boston headquarters, a finger-print expert, made the application, according to Chief Ernest Bishop of Quincy.

When a youth was arrested in Hartford, giving his name as George F. Bersig, his finger-prints were sent out and Liess is said to have taken these and identified him as Hoppe, whom the Quincy authorities wanted for the murder.

Four others have made similar applications. These, according to police, are Joseph Lund, John Wesberg and Mrs. Elizabeth Farrar, all of whom were government witnesses, and John F. Collins, a private detective.

The rewards total $1640, of which $1000 was offered by Governor Fuller, $400 by Quincy City Council and $100 by Representative Alfred L. Brocius of Quincy. Mayor McGrath is considering a plan to have a committee decide who shall share.

Pleads Innocence

Nathan Ramen of Salem, 16 Malden court today pleaded not guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of three-year-old Mary V. Connell of Wakefield, who he is alleged to have knocked down while driving his automobile. The case was continued to Nov. 28 and he was held in $1000.

When You See this New England FARM LABEL

A BUNCH of red radishes for a nickel, for instance! Let's suppose there were two boxes of them in your marketman's display of fresh vegetables . . . one plain, ordinary market box, and another bearing this New England Farm Label. As a matter of fact, this actually is an official registered label, safeguarded by law. It is issued only by state Commissioners of Agriculture for the purpose of identifying New England quality farm products produced, graded and packed in accordance with official state standards.

Suppose you knew all that when you saw those radishes. From which box would you have chosen a bunch to take home?

GRADED PRODUCE WINS

Exactly! And that trivial five-cent bit of imaginary marketing illustrates precisely how official grade names and labels will benefit the consumer, giving each purchaser a comfortable feeling of certainty, a sort of official guarantee that the labeled product meets certain definite requirements of quality all the way from the grade that is uniformly best to the uniform, selected lower grades, at lower prices. Moreover, that label marks only things that are locally grown, products that come fresh from farm to market, carefully graded and packed.

But while we're "supposing," would it be unreasonable to suppose that in all probability you might have decided to take two or three bunches of those radishes? They looked so good, all graded to the same average red-and-white plumpness. You knew they'd be fresh and crisp, would keep their peppery sweetness a day or two extra.

GRADING HELPS BUSINESS

That's why the farmers and marketmen like the grading and labeling idea—because it helps business, increases sales and pleases the customers. People like to know what they are buying, like the definite sponsorship, uniformity and reliability that goes with standard grades and trade-mark labels. It's the modern way of marketing the products of all alert industries.

The total annual production of New England farms is worth FOUR HUNDRED AND TWENTY-ONE MILLION DOLLARS at market values, yet New England now has to spend other hundreds of millions elsewhere to get enough of these things to feed its own prosperous population. This grading and labeling plan is the heart and soul of the New England Farm Marketing Program sponsored by the Agricultural Committee of the New England Council.

IN FIVE STATES NOW

Five New England states have already enacted laws creating authority for the establishment of uniform grades and standards for quality products of New England farms. It is the first great step in a comprehensive program for making agriculture add more and more millions to the economic wealth and prosperity of New England.

MISS ELOISE WELD TO BE TENDERED NIGHT-BEFORE-THE-BIG-GAME DANCE

Dedham Country and Polo Club Will Be Scene of Gay Bud Affair Tonight

NO ONE QUESTIONS THE DELIGHT of sitting about in a comfortable place with a group of congenial people and chatting between sips of tea and puffs of cigarettes. The joys of huge dances with a cheeringly long stag line are too frequent to need comment. Luncheons are delicious, if one is hungry, and has no thought of diet, but sometimes just once, possibly, what a great lark it would be if some adventurous soul would dare to come out via a circus, a strictly "society circus," of course, but a first rate rollickingly original affair that would provide talk and recollections for many moons.

IT NEEDN'T BE A CIRCUS, IT could be so many other jolly departures from a rather monotonous round of the usual performances. With Mr. Mike, the famous radio man, possibilities loom high for wit and cleverness, and certainly a theater party back stage is as amusing as a party can be. The calendar lists luncheons and teas, and dinners and dances, and then all over again it lists more luncheons and more teas and more dinners and more dances in such rapid succession that it is very difficult to remember later just whose dance it was or whose tea, or whose dinner, there is so little generally to distinguish them one from the other. One sighs longingly for a social "Graf Zeppelin" which will journey forth into new territory and begin a new epoch in deb parties.

TONIGHT IS THE HUGE AND long anticipated dance for Miss Eloise Weld at the Dedham Country and Polo Club. The young set has looked forward with relish to this event. Out-of-towners have been rambling in for the great "night before" affair. Football comes so handily the next day that a weekend jollification is scheduled. About twenty-five girls not registered from "Boston" are on the invitation list. Miss Electra Webb and Miss Evelyn Talbot from New York are staying with Miss Weld as house guests. Autumn leaves, that lend themselves so charmingly to decoration at this season of the year, and in the clubs that are located outside of the city, make the setting at the Dedham club for the some hundred girls and much longer list of men that are attending the dance. Miss Weld wears white created in chiffon with intricate and subtle draping.

TOMORROW ARE MORE dances as aftermaths, in most cases of the football performance in Cambridge. Mrs. Austin Potter is having a dinner and dance for her daughter, Miss Victoria Potter, and Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Williams are giving a dance for Miss Mary Williams and Miss Juliet Richardson.

AMONG THE RETURNING flock of summer travelers are two with more than just a little interest surrounding them. Barthold Schleisinger is back from abroad again. That has happened so many times to Boston's once eligible bachelor that in itself it carries little surprise. This return trip is with Mrs. Barthold Schleisinger, the former Mrs. Gladys Anne Wicks, whom he married some time last June in Pomfret, Conn. The place at 100 Beacon st. which is to be the social center for many smart things that happen during the winter will be presided over by the interesting host and his attractive lady.

Mr. Schleisinger is widely known. He is a brother to Mrs. Jasper Whiting, Mrs. A. Lovell Little, Mrs. James A. Parker, and Mrs. Arthur Perrin.

ATLANTIC CITY, THAT HAVEN for both rest and pleasure seekers, was the place selected by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Menard of Cohasset for an autumn vacation spot. The Menard year round home is in Cohasset, where Mr. Menard's flair for amateur dramatics can be whole-heartedly indulged and Mrs. Menard finds a full scope for her tireless philanthropic interests.

ALMOST FIRST IN THE HAPPENINGS scheduled for November is the "At Home" of Mrs. Stanwood Gray Wellington and Miss Ruth Baker Wellington, in the big house in Chestnut Hill. Miss Wellington, after being graduated from the Beaver school, went to Santa Barbara, Cal., her mother's old home, for further schooling. A number of affairs are being planned for her first season here, beginning with a large house dance in February and followed by numerous dinners and luncheons through the winter. Miss Wellington is the granddaughter of the late Mr. William H. Wellington of Beacon street.

THE CHILTON CLUB FIGURED largely in the debs' day yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. William G. Perry entertained extensively for Miss Juliet Richardson and Miss Eleanor Perry. Beginning with tea, five hundred guests, the girls danced unflaggingly through the evening, and sat down to a midnight supper, and into the pale gray hours of the morning. The beautiful new ballroom in the addition at 150 Commonwealth ave. she tered most of the merrymaking, and was spared the effervescent exhilarants that made and intends on its prin- time "ecstatic during a too swagger affair last winter.

AN EARLIER CHILTON CLUB date was the luncheon of Mrs. T. Hanaard entertained a small gathering of about twenty youth itself ready to dance until two of the newly blossomed buds The young things spent the intervals allowed them

BARES 'MURDER' OF HUB BOY IN CONFESSION

The complete confession of Carl Pansram, now under arrest in Washington, to the murder of a Boston boy, was made public today by Hub police in the hope that, if there was such a crime, some one will recall it and link Pansram's story with it.

Pansram, following his arrest in Washington for alleged house breaking, boasted of a long series of crimes, in some of which, the police have since ascertained, he was telling the truth.

His confession to the Boston murder, given out today by Chief Inspector Ainslee J. Armstrong, head of the Boston police bureau of criminal investigation, is as follows:

"In the summer of 1922 I murdered a young boy between that large concrete bridge on the north end of Boston, near the Y M C A, and the next bridge where the trolley tracks pass nearby.

"Some woods and a slough about one mile from the Y M C A going toward Gloucester from Charlestown on the trolley, about one quarter mile from the trolley tracks and to the left in the woods.

"This boy's name I don't know, but he lived about two miles from where I murdered him. His aunt ran a store near his home, on the right side of the street going up the hill from the trolley tracks.

"I was seen by numerous people, including the boy's aunt and the crew and passengers of the car on which we rode from near the boy's home to where we got off the car at the slough and walked into the woods."

"The body was found one or two days after the murder and some foreigner was arrested for the murder, as I read in the papers, but whether he ever was tried for it I don't know. If he was, he was innocent as I alone am guilty of this boy's death.

"I beat his head with a rock which was found beside the body by some boys who were picking berries there the day following.

"I can somebody presents information to the police of some other crime either in Boston or nearby, nothing more will be done about Pansram's story, the records having already been searched without result.

LEGION FIGHTS FOR MEMORIAL

Disagreeing with a decision rendered by City Councillor Peter J. Neligan, the memorial building committee of the Cambridge Post, American Legion, today appointed a special legal committee to fight for the proposed site at Harvard sq.

By a unanimous vote of the Legion memorial building committee a site for the proposed building was selected in the Harvard sq district. On advice given by the city solicitor this site cannot be used for such a purpose.

The site chosen by the Legion men was once a portion of the Cambridge Common and because of this fact the city solicitor feels that it can never be used for building or other public purposes.

PLAN HARD FIGHT

The legislative act upon which the city attorney bases his decision reads, "Be it further enacted, That said enclosure shall be forever kept and appropriated to public use only, as a public park, promenade, and place for military parade; and no part thereof shall, on any pretense, be appropriated to any purpose of private use or emolument."

Despite this act the Boston Elevated tracks run under and on part of this property which is bordered by Kirkland and Peabody sts., and Massachusetts ave.

The site if allowed for the purpose the Legion men wish it for would be ideal in every respect. It is city owned land; it is a strategic point, and almost the exact size needed for the proposed memorial building. It is thought that such a memorial building as the Legion plans would cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 and would be a public auditorium, and it deemed advisable could accommodate wings on either side for a fire and police station.

WOULD BE IDEAL SITE

The committee feels that nowhere in the city is there such an excellent site for a memorial to commemorate the service and deeds of heroism to the cause of humanity.

Every legal law and act will be tested out by the Legion attorneys before they drop their fight to have the proposed memorial structure erected on this site.

The legal committee selected by the Legion to fight their cause includes Judge Francis J. Good and Daniel J. Crowley, both past commanders of the Post. Ralph W. Hart is chairman of the memorial building committee with John D. Crowley, vice-chairman.

DEMAND SLAYER VET BE FREED

Providence, R. I. Oct. 19 (AP)—Charging the Rhode Island parole, welfare commission and State board of parole with being indirectly responsible for the killing of an East Providence woman last year by Peter J. Finley, ex-shellshocked war veteran, Regional Director Lester B. Rowlatham of the Veterans bureau asked the state to release Finley from jail so that he may be placed in a Government hospital.

Finley on January 8, 1927, shot and killed Mrs. Emily Hamblin in East Providence after he was paroled from the Rhode Island state hospital for mental diseases where he had been a patient.

Seven physicians who examined Finley at the hospital testified against the parole before he was set free.

BALLOT FOR 3 NEW BISHOPS

Washington, Oct. 19 (AP)—The House of Bishops of the Episcopal church in convention here was called together today to ballot for missionary bishops of the dioceses of southern Brazil, Wyoming and Nevada. Nominations had been made in executive sessions but were not announced. Regulations prescribed closed doors and secret ballots, and a majority vote was necessary to election. The House of Deputies must concur.

Vacancies in the districts of Wyoming and southern Brazil were caused by the resignations of Bishops Nathaniel S. Thomas and Lucien Lee Kinsolving. The Nevada diocese has been administered by Arthur W. Moulton, missionary bishop of Utah since the death of Bishop George C. Hunting in 1924.

A letter to the Most Rev. Randall Thomas Davidson, archbishop of Canterbury, which will be sent him with felicitations of the bishops and deputies on his retirement, was made public today. With it will be sent a purse of money to be taken up at the convention. Gifts totaling $4000 have already been made.

STATE FENCES IN FACTORY

Workmen employed by the Metropolitan District Commission today began grading and preparing for seeding the strip of land owned by the State which separates the front entrance to the Puritan Doughnut Company factory from the sidewalk on Old Colony rd., Dorchester.

Until recently customers entered the factory by crossing the state land. Then the commission ordered the land fenced off and the front entrance to the factory was closed. A new [illegible] erected yesterday makes it necessary for customers to enter by a side door.

Fred Gleason, proprietor of the factory, says he will apply to the courts for a writ of mandamus to give him right-of-way through the State land from the entrance to his factory to the sidewalk.

DYEHOUSE SWEPT BY $10,000 FIRE

Leominster, Oct. 19—Fire which caused an estimated damage of $10,000 swept through a brick dyehouse in the factory of the Wood Novelty Company on Manchester st., and before it was put out three firemen were overcome by smoke and a number of others had to be relieved from duty in the face of the thick smoke.

The fire, which resisted all efforts for nearly four hours, was caused by an overheated pipe. Flames getting into thousands of feet of selected lumber caused smoke to drift through the factory so that all departments had to shut down as it was impossible to breathe.

The three firemen who were overcome and taken to the Leominster Hospital are H. Chester Hildreth, Myron E. Lambs and Joseph Turner.

MEXICO IN NEW DEBT PARLEY WITH BANKERS

Mexico City, Oct. 19 (AP)—El Universal today said negotiations for a new debt agreement had been resumed and Minister of Finance De Oca was holding a series of conferences with representatives of the international bankers.

The newspaper added that Mexico was demanding a reduction of the total debt, 60 years for its amortization and an agreement based on the country's capacity to pay. The bankers asked a 45-year limit and progressive yearly payments, the increase to start three years after the agreement becomes effective. If the bankers' plan is acceptable, bondholders are represented as willing to cut the debt.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW SAYS PATRIOTISM PERISHES AT GENEVA

CALLS LEAGUE A SCHOOL FOR NEW STATESMANSHIP

By GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

Copyright, 1928, by the New York American Inc. Reproduction prohibited in whole or in part. World rights reserved by Reuters

LONDON, Oct. 19—The real great thing that is happening at Geneva, headquarters of the League of Nations, is the growth of a genuinely international public service, the chiefs of which are ministers in a coalition which is in effect an incipient international government. In the atmosphere of Geneva patriotism perishes. A patriot there is simply a spy who cannot be shot.

Even Sir Austen Chamberlain with his naive assurance that on an Englishman first and last and all the time that is at stake can be left confidently to the League only a starving pig so outrageous that only a mad dog with a sore throat would have got away with it.

George B. Shaw

I am fully aware of the tendency, lately exposed by Senor Madariaga, to fill the posts in the Secretariat as well as the Assembly by diplomats sent to uphold the national interests of their country, this TRA MLADUM, and thus to undo the excellent beginnings made by Sir Eric Drummond in building up his staff of international lists from the ground.

TEMPLE OF THE WINDS

The system of appointment, which being frank jobbery, is the best of all systems in good hands and the worst in bad makes such a substitution possible enough.

Fortunately the snare I have to be dead in and to for an offense and embraces, ventilation is fatal t them.

Now Geneva is a veritable temple of the winds. I would say that the sort of young person in who being paid to slow around up on the problems of European history with a view to inventing for ean politics, does its futile work play on the adventures of Lord Ston and his valet who grew in in venting funny names and making himself socially agreeable to prime ministers and so on to be met with in Geneva, but he is an anachronism there, and being trained to be successful in an artificial area and conceptions of good form soon suffers a change if not into some thing worse at least into an article that passes all bounds in the relations between representative states. Some emotional touch of emotions between the nations and dangerous as it is and is.

In short, the League is a school for the new international statesmanship as against the old foreign office diplomacy. This appears more clearly on the spot than at home in England where the League is thought of as a single Institution under a single roof.

In Geneva it is seen to be in reality a city of international offices even at present. Two of them are more conspicuous than the rest, namely the Secretariat of the League and the International Labor office building, grandnew, designed Art Hou a hive, a clearinghouse, with labor gnuffled in masculine gruben and crowded and noisy with no de signed in the latest manner of fo ramen, bill notesque drawing, and with every boardroom paneled and furnished and chandeliered with a gift of some state donor in a private boat and wallowing in a quite extraordinary degree, a the League as a component as and unique distinction without grea temptuousness.

I have never been in a modern business building more handsomely equipped. Here M Albert Thomas reigns not as king, which would immediately suggest a French king, but as a pope; for this is the true international of which Mussolini only dreams, and M. Thomas, though a Frenchman to the last hair of his black beard and a meridional at that, is the most genuinely Catholic potentate in the world.

TOWER OF STRENGTH

And here the article is quite fresh no player of Whitehall leaping and

reputable can be said] another Times reporter, one of a new order in all we read the Agencies gentlemen, who have been sent into the hotel down the road with Sir Eric, are the nearest relics of a second-sight extinct, though to be found the time to know that they are dead.

Nevertheless, they know the value of those happy accidents of the old order who run the commissions of the Secretariat, and whose work necessarily overlaps their own at many points.

And the Secretariat might not at this quite clear as to why [illegible] office is the one to which it is for. And only they and [illegible] especially conscious of the new opposition politics (not having found any mention of them in The Times, Globe, or Macaulay) finds that Thomas is a tower of strength to it when the League's existence is threatened by the big powers whose moral standards it is forcing up so uncomfortably.

This is the second of a series of four articles by Shaw on the League of Nations. The third will appear in an early issue, probably tomorrow.

A car book, a home. Have you a garage for rent? Tell about it and give location in the Want Real Ads. That's the way to do it.

ILLNESS DEFERS TRIAL OF "BIG BILL" KELIHER

The larceny cases of William J. (Big Bill) Keliher, paroled bank wrecker, and two other men were again continued in Roxbury Court today when John J. Duffley, one of the defendants was reported sick. Duffley with William Connolin and Keliher are charged with larceny of $1,230 from two Boston business men. A woman is still being sought in connection with the operation of the three. Judge Palmer ruled to try the cases separately and continued until November 1.

ROYALTY ATTENDS LAST RITES FOR EMPRESS

Copenhagen, Oct. 19 (AP)—Impressive scenes marked the funeral services for the Dowager Empress Marie of Russia in the Russian Church here today. The sun shone brightly on the gilded domes.

Many members of the Romanoff imperial family had come to Copenhagen to attend the funeral. The Duke of York represented the British royal family, while both the King and Queen of Denmark were present. The elder was chief mourner, among those who received being representatives of the Danish authorities and members of the Russian colony.

TIGER LOVE by EUSTACE HALE BALL

An Amazing Story of a Dancer

CHAPTER 10

Rosia in all the years of her dancing in native villages had never been face to face with this menacing situation nor with characters of the type assembled here.

"Let me go!" she screamed, in Hindustani, struggling to free herself from the rough hands of the bulkiest of the white traders. "Oh, I beg of you, Sahibi Let me go!"

Nigil, fighting now with her claws, was a pathetic figure as she was shoved brutally back onto the edge of the crowd which had drawn around the table.

"If only . . . if only!" she screeched, but her voice suddenly muted as a hairy hand was pressed over her toothless mouth, and her head pushed back with a force which almost cracked her aged neck.

"Be quiet, woman, or we will cut thy crackling throat!" cried a burly old native ruffian in the language which she understood.

"What is a dancing girl for but to dance?" howled one of the traders, in Hindustani.

"She cannot dance!" cried one of the nautch girls, from the other side of this maudlin crowd. "Clear space and I will show this country creature the dance of dances!"

"Here is sport, old duffer!" roared one of the traders in English. "We'll make a contest of it and give a prize to the winner."

"Sit the little lassie down, and give the other a chance!" ordered another of the white men. "Clear the way, boys, for a cake walk! This is a bloody fine show for a dirty hole hundreds of miles from a white man's city!"

The natives did not understand his words, but his meaning was clear as he began shoving men and women aside with ruthless impartiality. He forced an opening in the center of the moiling group of Chinese, Hindus and the rest of the variegated crew who had swarmed into this, the worst dive of a small but busy interior trading town.

A scene showed, with the big white man, with his glib mastery of half a dozen dialects, soon brought quiet. Drinks of as many nationalities as one could count on the fingers of a hand were being distributed by grinning servants, who reaped a harvest of coins.

The native musicians were gaily strumming their drums and the reed instruments began their droning.

Rosia, trembling from head to foot, obeyed the gruff command of one of the traders. She crouched down in her chair while eyes centered upon the young woman who had proclaimed her own ability as the superior dancer.

And there in the varied lights of the place, ranging from native oil lamps to lanterns, of more modern make, this creature of the maddest, wickedest level of the motley town began to thrill her audience with the steps of one of the most ancient and sacred dances of India.

"Horrible!" thought Rosia, clasping her fingers to her lips. "Why do not the gods strike her down for such sacrilege?"

She gazed about her, awe-stricken, for the moment, forgetting her own predicament. Leering, lascivious faces all about were straining to follow each movement of the wanton creature's body.

"None of your bally temple stuff!" howled a trader in English. "Make it snappy, girl!"

He tossed a handful of coins to

RABBI WISE HITS MENCKEN AS MENACE

H. L. Mencken was excoriated as the leader of a school of thought that is ruining American youth in a bitter attack by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York before 2000 delegates to the Norfolk county teachers' convention in Tremont Temple today.

"The greatest menace to American ideals today is mob-mindedness," Dr. Wise declared. "And mob-mindedness means a minimum of reason and a maximum of emotion. Mencken is dispensing garbage—a cheap, trivial excuse for thinking. And the young people who are sitting at his feet and believing they are expressing mental freedom are nothing but deluded slaves of a passing vogue, subscribers to the lowest common denominator of life."

Rabbi Wise declared that high school teachers have this problem to face because many young people today think that they are each "different" from their fellows because they dare to smoke a lot of cigarettes daily and defy decent conventions.

"If they would only think things through for themselves and dare to not smoke, but to do things that their better natures dictate they would be expressing freedom," he said.

"But these misguided youths are mob-minded the same as many older people.

TRIES TO DIE ON GRAVE

New Bedford, Oct. 19 (AP)—Miss Madeleine Ives, 31, attempted to commit suicide in Oak Grove cemetery today by slashing her wrists with a safety razor blade, then lying across the grave of Walter Perry, for whom she was housekeeper until his death last February.

She was found on the grave by Sylvester Deane, cemetery foreman. Still conscious despite severe loss of blood, Miss Ives told police that Mr. Perry, who was 71, had been calling to her ever since his death. She will recover.

Miss Ives had visited the cemetery daily since her former employer's death and placed flowers on his grave, according to Deane.

WELCOME ELECTRIC TRAIN

While whistles of 26 locomotives soon to be discarded shrieked in the train shed, the first electric train of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad pulled out of East Boston terminal today, inaugurating the new service.

Tears were approximately 1st passengers aboard the first electric train, among them President Gard ner F. Wells of the road, Vice President and General Manager George W. Wells, Assistant Treasurer and Secretary Charles Curtiss, Supt. John R. Sullivan and members of the board of directors.

Charles C. Smith, veteran locomotive engineer with 20 years of service to his credit, was motorman of the train. The first guard was Arthur Wright and the second guard Lester Tarr.

As the train pulled out at 10:28 a. m., 500 railroad employees added their cheers to the din of whistles and the passengers and crew waved back in recognition.

Within a few weeks it is expected that the entire line will be operated by electricity and all steam locomotives and old cars discarded.

CONCERT GIVEN BY BARITONE PLEASING

By MOSES SMITH

Luther Emerson, baritone, gave a concert in Jordan Hall last night assisted by Reginald Boardman pianist. An audience of good size heard the singer with obvious pleasure and applauded him cordially throughout the evening.

The baritone displayed an excellent voice, of almost orchestral command. This organ he managed fairly well so far as volume and quality of tone were concerned. He was a bit timid about letting it out into a fortissimo, but his program offered little opportunity for vigorous strokes. His more quiet tones were effective, and especially in his German songs they had a beautiful quality.

The singer did not manage his phrasing so well, on many occasions breaking a phrase either because of faulty technique, faulty breathing or, or simply [illegible]. He was also handicapped by a program that ran to undue uniformity—either in the mood to be portrayed or else in musical idiom. As a result, a collection of songs that showed praiseworthy desire to search out good and unfamiliar material lost much of its effectiveness.

The singer was probably at his best in three songs of Helen Hopekirk, set to Heine's "Nachts in der Kajute," though a French group was also rendered asymmetrically. But even here, as in his English numbers, the enunciation of the text was indistinct. Consonant sound tended to evade the listener and vowels were blurred.

On the whole the baritone, on first hearing, gives the impression that his native equipment is considerable, and that when his experience, especially in public performance is wider, he will make a pleasurable singer.

REVEAL WAGE PACT OF MINERS AND OWNERS

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 19—The joint wage scale committee of Indiana coal operators and miners, which has been negotiating for several weeks, agreed to a wage contract which called for a scale of $6.15 per day and a 91-cent rate for tonnage workers.

The agreement, subject to a favorable referendum vote of the miners of the district, ends the civil strife that has marked the Indiana coal mining situation since April 1, 1927, when a conference of miners and operators failed for the first time to adopt the $7.50 wage scale, with $1.04 rate for tonnage workers, agreed upon in 1920.

FIVE-HOUR DAY NEAR, ASSERTS E. A. FILENE

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 19—A five-hour working day for labor, and doubled salaries for teachers, were prophesied today by Edward A. Filene, president of William Filene's Sons Co. of Boston, speaking today before the 60th annual convocation of the University of the State of New York.

"The five-hour day is just around the corner," he declared, "and education is going to have financial support to a degree hitherto undreamed of. The American businessman is going to foot the bills and do it cheerfully.

"Education, as expressed through scientific industrial and business research, is largely responsible for America's great prosperity. The application of scientific methods, based on research, has enabled America to lead the world in productive efficiency.

ENJOY LUXURIES OF LIFE.

"As a result, American workmen can have not only the necessities of life, but most of the comforts and many of the luxuries. We have developed a business policy that results in a widespread distribution of the products of our industry.

"Our factories have been able to turn out, at a great volume of goods and at low costs because our population has the buying power to consume these goods. This buying power comes from high wages and low costs of production.

"The modern business and industrial system needs three factors. We must produce in large quantities, pay high wages; sell cheaply. That is prosperity—and it has come through scientific thinking, through research.

"Because they have begun to recognize that research pays large dividends, businessmen will generously support the educational system that supplies the scientists and experts. While we are contributing a great deal of money to education, it is wholly inadequate.

"Business needs workers who are reasonable. Instead of reckless in their considerations of social and economic issues. Cultural education is as important to business and industry as vocational training.

FIVE-HOUR DAY NEAR.

"It was formerly the fashion for the 'go-getter' businessman to look on learning and science as impractical. Now it is generally realized that our educational institutions are turning raw man power into a finished product that is desired by business. And business is ready to pay for it.

"I do not doubt that the salaries of teachers will be doubled within a surprisingly short time. There must be time and opportunity and money for teachers to travel. The five hour day will come when research has further perfected and extended mass production and so increased the volume of goods for consumption. Then the purchasing power of five hours' labor will be sufficient to buy all a man needs for a good living for himself, his wife and family. The five-hour day is closer than many realize."

FORGER IS GIVEN 8 YEARS IN PROVIDENCE COURT

Providence, Oct. 19—George Titus with 19 aliases, of which George Titus Wheeler is said to be his real name, was sentenced to eight years in State prison by Judge Walsh in superior court for forging a stolen American Express money order. He is 48 years old.

Alleged member of a gang of forgers, confidence men and flimflammers who operate from Montreal to the Mexican border, Titus maintained a stoic calm during a long recital of his criminal record by Asst. Atty.-Gen. Sigmund Fischer, Jr., and declined to say anything in his own behalf, except to reassert his innocence.

Titus was accused of forging the name of Eugene E. Kirby of Riverside to an American Express Co. traveler's check for $50.

AUTO LAW VIOLATORS HALTED IN CONCORD

Several hundred automobiles were stopped by Officers Nolan, Sheehan, Withrell, MacCallum and Lawson of the Concord police in connection with the announced state-wide drive of the police against motor law violators.

Four drivers were found to be operating without licenses; 15 had no registration certificates; three had neither license nor registration and one was operating a gear shift car on a restricted license.

RIVIERA OFFERS 'DIVORCES BY MAIL ONLY'

Monaco, Oct. 19 (AP)—A direct by mail campaign has been started in an effort to locate prospective divorcees in the Riviera always a rumble for business.

American and British couples, from honeymooners to those who have celebrated their golden wedding anniversaries, are being mailed a small booklet titled "How You Can Get Your Divorce."

Accompanying the pamphlet is a personal letter from the Monaco lawyer who originated this novel idea of stimulating business.

Should the husband desire a third cocktail before dinner, the wife may turn to page three and inform him that access dining is a just cause for divorce in Monaco.

When the wife asks for a little more cash to pay a bridge debt, friend husband need only point out section four, page two, which states that a person addicted to a personal gambler may obtain a divorce in this principality. This paragraph also works in the opposite sense when a stag poker party is in formation.

It is also dangerous to complain about the menu in front of the servants because friend wife might take that as semi-public humiliation, which is carefully treated on page five.

As the author of the work carefully points out in his personal letter "you probably have some definite reason for wanting a divorce. Read the enclosed treatise carefully. They have sufficient grounds to secure a divorce. We guarantee results and secrecy."

Rogers Banner in Milton Brings Reply From Will

Will Rogers has at last taken notice of Selectman Kenneth D. Johnson of Milton against the surreptitious stringing of a "Rogers for President" banner across Adams st., near the Hoover and Smith banners.

Here is what the famous comedian has wired Selectman Johnson:

"I hear that some nuts have conducted a house-to-house canvas for me in Milton and they painted on the canvas something about voting the anti-bunk ticket. Well I don't know whether the people that did this was trying to express their opinion of bunk as inflicted on Massachusetts by visiting candidates or whether they have fallen in love with my Harvard accent but I certainly appreciate their interest in my quiet and dignified campaign and I hope the board of selectmen will prosecute the hoodlums to the full extent of the law providing a law can be found to fit. (Signed) "WILL ROGERS."

PAIR ARRESTED IN HALF-MILE CHASE

After chasing an automobile half a mile when he became suspicious seeing the bumper hanging off, Motorcycle Officer James Goddard of the Newton police arrested two men in the machine in Newtonville, who gave their names as John F. Donovan, 32, of 10 Mt. Pleasant pl., Woburn, and William E. Murphy, 29, of 23 Salem st., Winchester.

When the men were taken to Newton police headquarters, the officer learned that the automobile of Richard Armstrong of 227 Oakland st., Wellesley, while parked on Walnut st., near Bacon pl., Newton, was sideswiped by another machine and tipped over. Police charged that the car was that in which Murphy and Donovan were riding.

Hit By Water Pitcher As He Attempts to Defend K. of C.

Brooksville, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP)—When Leon Whitehurst arose to defend the Knights of Columbus at an anti-Smith political meeting here he was struck with a glass water pitcher, alleged to have been hurled by former Mayor H. S. Simmons. He was only slightly injured.

Whitehurst arose after the Rev. I. N. Aldrich, who conducted the meeting, had invited expressions from the audience. He did not complete his statement.

FLIER AND HIS PLANE BURNED IN THE AIR

Polk, Pa., Oct. 19 (AP)—The burned plane and cremated body of Air Mail Pilot William C. Hopson was found three miles southwest of here today by searchers who scoured the piney area having received reports of flames having been dropped early yesterday.

Hopson was flying the mail route between New York and Cleveland. He was due to arrive in the Cleveland city at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Residents of the town reported that at 2 a. m. they saw the plane traveling westward and that a bright light burst from it and as it passed beyond a hill, the light was believed to be a flare.

Hopson was out of the dangerous Pennsylvania mountain region when he crashed.

DRY CHIEF IS SET FREE BY GOVERNOR

Indianapolis, Oct. 19 (AP)—Governor Jackson today issued a pardon for Dr. E. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, who this morning was taken to the State penal farm to begin serving a sixty-day sentence for contempt of the Indiana Supreme Court.

The pardon was issued before Dr. Shumaker had reached the State farm at Putnamville. It was given, according to the statement by the governor, because the sentence he would die long before it expired. Shumaker will take to pay the $500 he incurred in the Supreme Court in addition to his 60 days sentence. The head of the Anti-Saloon League in Indiana was found guilty of two counts of contempt of the Supreme Court for slandering each and all the members of the bench. The court overruled the decision of members of the court to fine him $1000 each. Shumaker sought for more than two years to escape serving time, but yesterday abandoned his fight against the sentence.

"TAKE THE AIR" BRINGS JOY TO CHILDREN

Three hundred crippled and deformed children of Massachusetts Hospital school, Canton are singing the praises of Will Mahoney, star comedian of "Take the Air" and other principals of this fine musical comedy, which comes in to engage next week at the Wilbur Theater.

Will is enshrined in the hearts of those 300 kiddies. His nimble legs never danced or sang before as they danced and sang for those unfortunate youngsters, who still smile despite the handicaps thrust upon them. His antics were never so funny as when he appeared before them on their own little stage.

The show was a special one, under the auspices of the Boston Evening American, one of the many this newspaper has given there to relieve the tedium, always felt in institutions.

Kitty O'Connor, of the lovely deep voice, cried when she left the stage and went to her dressing room at the hospital school. Let those persons who think theatrical folk are "hard-boiled" give ear. Kitty cried because the little crippled boys and girls wept when she sang her heart-touching song, "Lullaby," one of the feature songs of "Take the Air." Never has she had a more sympathetic audience.

Among the principals who entertained were Colette D'Arville, chic Parisian prima donna, William Kaegan, soloist, and Geneva Mitchell and Harry Long.

The children sang for the entertainers, and at the conclusion, Mr. Mahoney volunteered to send the kiddies two of the song hits of the show for them to learn and promised to entertain them again on his next visit to Boston. In the meantime, they are to learn the scores so that they may sing them for him upon his next visit.

The artists were conveyed to and from the institution in one of the luxurious motor coaches of the New England Transportation Co.

ONE MASONIC BODY WINS COURT FIGHT FROM OTHER

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 19 (AP)—A verdict upholding the right of Secretary of the Commonwealth Johnson to give the Free and Accepted Masons of Pennsylvania the exclusive right to register the Masonic emblems was returned by a jury in county court today.

Counsel for the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, which brought the suit in a mandamus action, claiming their organization was also entitled to use the insignia, was granted a new trial.

HAVERHILL GIRL TO WED AT PUBLIC PAGEANT

Haverhill, Oct. 19—Miss Louise Granon, 18, of Primrose, st., and Lloyd Straw, 23, of Main st., were selected today by officials of the Chamber of Commerce as the couple who will marry publicly at the Pageant of Progress Monday night.

A committee of the Chamber will seek a waiver of the five-day law so that the State armory spectacle will proceed without a hitch.

CRIPPLED KIDDIES MADE HAPPY

MOVE TO FREE SEWER GRAFT CONVICT

New York, Oct. 19 (INS)—The first definite move to free former Borough President Maurice E. Connolly from the penitentiary on Welfare Island was made today when Supreme Court Justice Edward Bleakman of Queens ordered the prosecution to appear for arguments on the issuance of a writ of reasonable doubt.

On application of Max D. Steuer, counsel for Connolly, papers were served on Dist. Atty. Richard S. Newcombe and Atty.-Gen. Tibert Ottinger, hailing them into court Monday morning to show cause why the writ should not be granted.

If the defence wins that skirmish, it may then ask that Connolly, under sentence of a year's imprisonment for conspiracy in the $18,000,000 Queens sewer scandal, be freed of bail pending an appeal.

POSTAL CLERKS READY TO MEET AT LAWRENCE

Four thousand postoffice clerks will be represented by the 400 delegates to the ninth annual convention of the Massachusetts Federation of Postoffice Clerks which will be held at Lawrence tomorrow and Sunday.

The seniority service tangle now occupying the attention of the postal department might be straightened out by a civil service court, in the opinion of the Federation, which will advocate this measure on the convention floor. Other business to be considered will be the retirement pension provisions.

Henry L. Mooney, president of the Federation, will open the convention for business. A banquet Saturday evening will feature Assistant Postmaster-General John H. Bartlett as the principal speaker.

FIND 2 BODIES IN AUTO; BARE 'SUICIDE PACT'

Ridgefield, Ct., Oct. 19 (INS)—Consummation of a suicide pact was indicated today when the bodies of Miss Margaret Moffitt, 36, maid in a wealthy family at Wilton, and Frederick Bowater, 38, of 189 Gilbert st., Bridgeport, were found in a car parked near the New York state line here.

Following an investigation state police announced they had found a note written by Bowater in which the couple's intention of dying together was announced.

Bowater had been in poor health for years. He was engaged to Miss Moffitt.

Miss Moffitt had been stabbed three times in the breast, once directly through the heart. Bowater's head was nearly blown off by a double-barreled shotgun. The knife was not located, but the shotgun, with both barrels containing newly exploded shells, was in the car. Because Miss Moffitt was clad in a white Louise dress and bedroom slippers police believe she was killed elsewhere.

Miss Moffitt was for several years employed as maid in the Wilton home of Miss Alice Smith and Mrs. George Martin, sisters.

Bowater had $4000 on deposit in banks in Danbury and Bridgeport. He purchased the car in which the bodies were found at New Haven on Tuesday.

Announcing a New Rapid-transit Service

To-day, an electric train, the first of a complete electric service, has been placed in operation between Boston and Lynn. Early in November, after the electrification has been completed, the entire service will be:

FASTER—A radical reduction in running time and in time between trains; and in addition, express service for certain hours of the day.

MORE COMFORTABLE—Absence of all smoke and cinders; smooth starting and stopping; and brilliant lights for your reading at night.

SAFER— New automatic signals and air brakes.

While this electrification has progressed faster than any other of its type, and entirely without accident, nevertheless certain delays were inevitable. The Company expresses to its patrons its appreciation of their courtesy in overlooking these necessary interruptions in service.

FIRST KAYDET VISIT IN 107 YEARS

TWELVE HUNDRED handsome young men will hop off four special trains tomorrow morning out back of Mechanics Building. They will be dressed in spick and span blue-gray uniforms. They will look as if they had just marched out of some high-class uniform tailoring establishment.

Nick Flatley

They will be the West Point Kaydets, here for the Army-Harvard football game at the Stadium. These boys are the most picturesque group in this or any other country. They are the cream of the broad land—the mental and physical champions from all corners, picked carefully to provide officers for the U. S. Army.

These 1200 young men will furnish as much thrill and excitement over in the Crimson horseshoe as the teams that fight it out. They will drill and evolute and maneuver for half an hour or so before the game. And that's worth speculators' prices all by itself.

This is the first time the Kaydets have been in Boston since 1821. That initial invasion was ordered by the War Department. The boys came by boat and train to Albany, then marched the rest of the way to Boston. C. C. Pyle could have signed up some real cross-country stars in those days.

The young soldiers remained here for 10 days. They were entertained in all the surrounding towns. Their visit will be brief this time. They detrain in the morning and depart in the evening, but they will make a real impression.

The Kaydets know how to travel. They come in four trains, but that doesn't mean luxury and space. The boys journey en masse, as you might say. Two to a lower berth, one to an upper, and four in each drawing room. That means 44 future generals to each car.

Will give them an idea of 40 Hommes—eight Chevaux level of the fighting soldiers of a few years back. But they ll be spick and span. They learn things like that at West oint.

ARMY SINGING AND CHEERING AT FOOTBALL GAMES IS IN A CLASS BY ITSELF.

History is in the making at the Stadium. The Kaydets have never paraded there, nor has the Army ever beaten Harvard.

REPUTATION HANDICAP AT WEST POINT

THE athletic teams that come up from West Point are sturdy, tough aggregations, usually. Life is that way down at the Academy. The boys take the chestiness out of the plebes in short order. The ballyhoo, which helps everywhere else, is fatal at West Point.

There is one great football player down there now, who is not on the squad. When he was appointed for the Academy, his home town paper ran a column boost with a cut. A clipping reached W. P. When the kid showed up, he was handed the yarn. He had to wear his picture on his cap.

Every upper classman that met him ordered the youngster to recite the laudatory screed, word for word. If he slipped—they all had copies—he had to repeat. He admits he mumbles it perfectly in his dreams. But he hasn't been forgiven yet.

The grandson of General Sherman was a student there. An upper

Dempsey Likes Ring Chances of Shamus

By JACK CONWAY

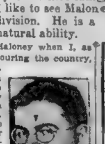
"I wish you would give me a little space in your column so that I can say a few nice things about Jim," declared Dempsey. "I would like to see Maloney prove a great success in the heavyweight division. He is a likeable youngster and has a great deal of natural ability.

"I first met Maloney when I, as champion, was touring the country, meeting all comers. We met on a western stage near some army post where Jim was stationed. He went the full distance of four rounds and convinced me he could fight.

"When Maloney defeated Delaney in New York, I felt I would have to battle him in my comeback attempt. Sharkey then stepped in and altered things.



Jack Conway

"I understand Jim is training harder than ever and that he has made a fine record during his most recent comeback. I wish him success in his bout with Jack Renault which will be staged by Eddie Eddie Mack's Argonne club on next Monday night.

"I can also see a bright future ahead for Ernie Schaaf. He is the baby of the heavyweight contenders. This boy is only 20 years of age, but nevertheless, has battled some of the best heavyweights in the world.

"Phil Schlosberg has brought Schaaf along carefully and has now got him to a point where he can step in with any company. Schaaf has a fine body, standing six feet in height and weighing 196 pounds. He is strong, aggressive and a great puncher. More important, he has a fighting heart.

"With a little more experience, Schaaf will prove a sensation. His future is a bright one. He should remain active in the ring for ten years."

ALTHOUGH insisting he will never box again, Dempsey keeps in close touch with the boxing situation. He is particularly interested in heavyweights. The Tiger likes to see the big fellows in action. When he does, he always dopes out in his mind how he would fight them.

Last summer Dempsey refereed the Risko-Squires bout in Detroit. He later told me how he would have fought both men.

After Jack saw Tom Heeney work out, he declared he could knock out the New Zealand heavyweight in a few rounds. Dempsey secretly hoped Heeney would beat Tunney so that he could get a crack at Charley Harvey's protege. Dempsey knows that Tunney's strong style will always beat him, but he never worried much about a wide open battler like Heeney.

DEMPSEY was also interested when told about the hitting ability of Bob Mills, New Hampshire heavyweight champion, who mingles with Tony Fuente in the semifinal to the Maloney-Renault affair. Mills recently knocked out Eddie Callahan and Romero Rojas.

"I like heavyweights who can punch," said the Tiger as he dug a left hook into the ribs of Jack Wall, his energetic publicity director and theatrical manager.

AL WALKER, New Yorker faces Al Schoener of Hartford in another heavyweight muss while Tommy Coyne of South Boston and Carl Roach of Everett meet in a four rounder. In another four, Lee Anderson, Roxbury, faces Joe Cabana of Cape Cod.

GEORGETOWN FACES HARD BATTLE

Georgetown University's "point a minute" team, which has rolled up 171 points in three games, to lead the whole country in total score, swings down the streets this week in preparation for seven straight top-notch games in as many weeks.

Beginning with tomorrow's game against West Virginia, Washington, the Blue and Gray eleven will then meet in order Duke, West Virginia, Carnegie Tech, Fordham and Le Tro[illegible].

Thus far uncored upon by Mt. St. Mary's, Susquehanna and Lebanon Valley, the Georgetown juggernaut has shown promise of being one of the East's best bets.

In the three games thus far played, only five first downs have been scored, with four of those being by forwards. At no time has any team been within the 30-yard marker or in any way threatened to score.

Lou Little again has one of his powerful lines, which for the past four years, have been the reason in great part for the Washington coach's success. For the first time since his taking over the reins at Georgetown, he is possessed of a surplus of backs.

BUCKY HARRIS DETROIT PILOT

and its financial terms were withheld.

Part of the negotiations that bring Harris to Detroit involved the transfer of Jackie Warner, Detroit infielder, to the Washington Club. Harris said he would be in uniform daily but would play on the Tiger team only in emergencies.

Harris' selection to succeed Moriarty was forecast almost with the close of the major league season this year, when he came to Detroit for a conference with President Navin. At that time neither Navin nor Harris would discuss the conference.

The rumors of Harris' selection were given added weight with announcement that Walter Johnson would take over the reins at Washington, followed shortly afterward by Moriarty's resignation.

Criticism of Moriarty's management of the Tigers began early in the present season, his second as leader of the teams of which several years ago he was third baseman.

In his resignation Moriarty blamed "unfavorable circumstances" for the poor showing of the Tigers. He did not attempt to explain what he meant by the phrase, but said that his experience had taught him to "accept the reverses of baseball with the same spirit that accompanies success."

Coach Horween Has Confidence in Team

By TED LYNCH

Harvard is ready.

A long football drive which started way back on September 15 has come to a close and the only feat left in this drive is the objective, the Army game which takes place in the Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

Harvard is not only ready but it is confident. Regardless of the rumored power of this Army team, one finds across the Charles confidence of the most sturdy sort.

The Harvard players feel that they have an offence which will buck the holds in the line will be off [illegible] its deepest [illegible]

Confronted by the press reporters this morning at the home of the Varsity Club, Coach Arthur Horween broke his silence and answered the eleven famous players who will face the Army men. To use the words of the Harvard Coach, the starting Harvard team will be [illegible] Harvard and Douglas at end, Pickard and Clark at tackle, Ticknor and Bill Ticknor at guard, Barrett at center, Elliott Putnam quarterback, Capt. Arthur French and Dave Guarnaccia halfback with Wally Harper playing fullback. Guarnaccia will do the punting and we feel that we will win.

LINEUP SETTLED

Thus ends Horween's short but weighty speech. His few words carry plenty of power for they settle two doubtful positions in the Harvard lineup and also confirmed the rumor that Guarnaccia would do the kicking.

Elliott Putnam has been picked as the Crimson signal caller over Tommy Gilligan. Frank Packard has been elected as the starting end over Jack O'Connell. These two decisions were quite unexpected to the football hordes at Cambridge.

It was felt that Gilligan was to pilot the Crimson in this important game, while O'Connell's end play had stamped him over all the ends that is said.

In fact it is the same team which faced North Carolina a week ago. Bill Ticknor will again alternate with Tim Clark at guard and tackle. Clark will be playing an offensive tackle while Ticknor will move over to this post from guard on the defense.

Horween stated that Gilligan would not enter the fray with a second team backfield, but would be held as relief back to sub for any one of the varsity carriers. "Shorty" Crawford will take Gilligan's post as signal caller on the shock back field.

MASTER OF AERIAL GAME

Taking this statement of Horween's into consideration, it appears that Gilligan will play a very important role tomorrow. He has been termed the psychological back who will enter the fray fresh as a threat to catch the opponent's in a tiff and none to peppy state to thwart his uncanny football running ability.

The main purport of the Harvard's confidence lies in the fact that it feels it has mastered a passing offensive which will catch the heavy Army team completely off its guard. It feels that its defence is sound and that the advantage the Army

HUB FILLED FOR BIG GAME

Not even the greatest of Yale-Harvard duels of the past aroused as much interest as the Crimson-Cadets meeting.

This is not so surprising at that, for West Point has never played football here and the Cadets have not been in the Hub since 1924. Naturally, everybody and his brother went to see the Army eleven in action and the corps on parade.

Only 57,000 will have the privilege, for the Stadium can only accommodate that many. If 200,000 seats were available there is little doubt that the game would be a sell-out just the same.

Elaborate plans have been taken to keep order in the environs of the Stadium before the game. Several thousand extra men have been specially sworn in to help keep the peace.

Still, if many false tickets have been put in circulation, there is found to be confusion at the gates when the attendants refuse to accept them.

The gates will be thrown open at 1 o'clock, and those who want to see the Cadets drill are urged to be on hand early for the performance will go on before the game and not between the halves, as was first announced.

The Army continues to rule a favorite here. The odds range from 10-5 to 2-1, with little Harvard money in sight.

The Crimson rooters say they are confident that Coach Horween's charges will be the ones, but they are not confident enough to lay on the opening kick-off coin at the even money.

Coach Horween nor Coach Daly have given out any official statements as to the probable starting lineups, but it is known that the following men will be the ones to start the game:

Harvard—Ends, Cabot and Cooper; tackles, Hall and Wilson; guards, Hubbard and Hall; center, Hall; quarterback, Hubbard; halfbacks, Hall and Hall; fullback, Hall.

Army—Ends, Hall and Hall; tackles, Hall and Hall; guards, Hall and Hall; center, Hall; quarterback, Hall; halfbacks, Hall and Hall; fullback, Hall.

The Cadets met Harvard between 1917 and 1927 and the best the Army ever done was to hold Harvard to a tie on one occasion.

Arena Club to Help Burke Benefit

Desirous of co-operating in every way possible with the committee which is staging the Michael Burke Benefit show at the Arena, the Arena A. C., which has been staging popular priced shows at the Arena, announced yesterday through Col. Bob Sickels, its matchmaker, that it would stage no more shows until the Burke Benefit was out of the way.

Through the courtesy of the Arena A. C. and George V. Brown of the Arena, the big St. Botolph st. building has been given over to the Burke benefit committee, and the Arena A. C. at its office in room 318, 333 Washington st., will handle tickets for the benefit.

PERES AND SAINTS IN CRUCIAL GAME

In what promises to be one of the hardest fought and outstanding semi-pro football games of the present season the Pere Marquette and B. S. Peloe and Paul A. A. teams both of South Boston will battle for supremacy on Saturday afternoon at the C. J. Lee Playground, South Boston.

The Caseys are apt to have the real fine crossed by a New England team—the only team to cross the line this year being the Philadelphia Yellow Jackets, one of the country's best professional teams.

The Saints, fresh from their victory over the Pittsfield Pere Marquettes Thanksgiving Day football battle, are confident of repeating the Casey goal line performance, although they intend to help it at the expense of the South Boston Knights.

FRED GREENE TO ACT AS PUBLICITY AGENT

Announcement is made by Sheldon H. Fairbanks, manager of the Boston Madison Square Gardens, the new North Station arena, that publicity for that enterprise will be handled under the direction of Fred C. Greene of the Boston Transcript.

Mr. Greene is a veteran Boston newspaperman with the wide acquaintance that goes with his calling and with the somewhat unique experience of having divided his work between news reporting and the covering of sporting events.

TECH SOCCER TEAM OFF FOR DARTMOUTH GAME

The soccer team of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology left for Hanover, N. H., where they will take on the Dartmouth team tomorrow afternoon. Because of their victory over the Northeastern team last Friday they are confident that they can turn the tables on the Dartmouth eleven since Northeastern has already scored a victory over Dartmouth.

ATTLEBORO AT FORT BANKS

Not discouraged by their recent setbacks the Fitton football team of East Boston will take the field on Sunday afternoon at Fort Banks, Winthrop with the strong Attleboro City Club as their opponents. It has been a mystery to the Fitton followers why the Noddle Islanders have suddenly stumped. The team consists of the best material that has ever appeared on a Fitton team of the past, and their failure to pile up a large score on their opponents has been puzzling. However, a new spirit will be shown on Sunday when the Fittons take the field as the coaching will be under the direction of "Tony" Ford, Fitton backfield star who will succeed Ed Brawley who has retired from active coaching and will act in an advisory capacity. Frank (Red) Irwin will continue as the captain.

It is a tough assignment that awaits Ford to bring a victory to East Boston when they face the Attleboro team. The Jewelry City team has the active support of the Attleboro Chamber of Commerce and a large guarantee was necessary to bring the team to Winthrop for their first appearance in these parts.

classman met him on the plain. He asked a lot of questions and discovered that the youngster was proud of the feat of his illustrious progenitor. So the boy was presented with a broom and a lathe, and ordered to gallop up and down for hours, to show that he was a worthy descendant of the old general.

Kids who go to become generals, pulled up with their own importance, are taught quickly that results and not a reputation count. Which is why so many upstanding, keen young men come out in the graduating classes.

There's one regular army private on the football team. Jack Dibb, the huge guard, was an enlisted member of K Co. of the 35th Infantry before he went to West Point. He was stationed at Schofield Barracks in Hawaii. So he never misses a signal.

HAVE TO BE RUGGED TO SURVIVE GRIND

PERHAPS this talk about life at the Academy isn't exactly sports, but it's pertinent at this particular time. Something like 30 per cent of the opening classes get the air before the finish comes. Four tough years take the real sporting spirit.

There's a Plebe's Bible that's intricate and remarkably human. And the boys have to know it backwards. All part of the rattle. No wonder the champs who can find time for football are rugged and smart and hard boiled.

Here's a typical excerpt from that Bible:

Q.—What do plebes rank?

A.—Sir, the superintendent's dog, the commandant's cat, the waiters in the Mess Hall, the hell cats (the a. m. buglers) and all the admirals in the whole blamed navy.

See the Knydets, if you can. But watch out for phoney tickets.

TWO PURPLE STARS HURT

Worcester, Oct. 19.—Although scrimmage was omitted from practice for fear of injuries, the Holy Cross football squad has three members suffering from minor hurts received in the workout.

Tony Mantreda, fleet left halfback, was kicked in the left leg while blocking in dummy scrimmage and was forced to leave the field. He was limping badly.

Ed Gannon, regular left guard, also left the field early as a result of a blow on the right shoulder. He was unable to use his right arm at all. Mike Mikelski, another veteran guard, is in poor condition and retired after a few minutes work.

The freshman team was on the field prepared for another scrimmage, but the varsity coaches decided to call off any real football with the Fordham game only two days away. Four full teams spent most of the session drilling on new plays which will be used for the first time against Fordham next Saturday.

The coaches made sure that each man on the squad knew his individual assignment on every play before sending the players to the showers.

Boston Evening American's Stadium Fight Won

World Knows Now — That Hub Schoolboys — Have Sport Stadium

NEW FIELD DEDICATED BY MAYOR

Schoolboys Now Have Magnificent Field to Play on

Boston schoolboys are happy today, park and city officials rest back with the pleasant satisfaction of a work well done, high school coaches, and others interested in the physical as well as the mental development of American boyhood, have seen realized a great step toward their ideal.

And the Boston Evening American is content, for having once more proved the friend of the sporting public and the readers of the paper.

The new municipal stadium for Boston school athletes, the result of a long and untiring effort by the former schoolboy sporting editor of the Boston American, Joseph Cashman, was dedicated yesterday.

Almost a year ago, the editor of the schoolboys saw a great need of a playground for Boston high school athletes. The teams were practicing on sandlots covered with rocks and rubbish that not only hindered the production of good teams but also left many nasty scars and broken bones on the young men who tried out for their high school elevens.

The games were played at Braves Field, a long hike for most of the Intown school lads. Conditions were coming to a head. The boys were giving up their athletic ambitions and schoolboy sports suffered a general lack of enthusiasm.

Cashman reported the matter to the editor, Nick Flatley, who immediately ordered him to make a survey of conditions and to start a campaign to uncover the possibilities of remedying the situation.

DRIVE IS STARTED

With the zeal of one who had his heart bent on the betterment of each boy sports, Joe went to work. One day he was digging up facts at the Mayor's office and the next he was chasing after architects to get the approximate cost of erecting a stadium.

Every night he wrote a story on his findings. The Hon. Malcolm Nichols, Mayor of Boston, began to investigate possibilities. Park Commissioner William E. Long also put his shoulder to the wheel. In fact all the city officials, who could possibly aid the movement, lent a helping hand.

It's no easy job to put over a project of this sort. With roads to be built and repaired, the people clamoring for improvement of city conditions and public buildings always under construction, it took real work to nudge $40,000 out of the city coffers for a stadium that outwardly did not appear necessary.

But the Mayor was anxious to have the stadium and Commissioner Long picked the location on Ashburton rd. After the red tape had been cut and the funds granted, construction started and the American's fight was won.

MAYOR MAKES SPEECH

Mayor Nichols made the dedication address with a stirring speech. His two little boys, Clark S. and Dexter P., raised the American flag and Charles P. Norton, Arthur P. Shurtleff and William D. Austin, architects, told of the work on the beautiful new field house, the stands and the layout of the field itself.

Myles T. McSweeney, Assistant Sports Editor of the Boston Evening American, who was the man behind the scenes in this fight for the stadium, gave a talk in which he brought out the fight successfully waged by the Boston Evening American and the manner in which all Boston benefited by this work.

It has been a great accomplishment, Mayor Nichols, Park Commissioner Long, Councillor John Dowd of Roxbury, Joe Cashman, Nick Flatley and Myles T. McSweeney, are all deserving of the praises that are being sung today.

And the Boston Evening American alone can take the credit. It was the only Boston paper that saw an urgent need and presented a practical solution.

MAYOR SAYS HIS BIT

Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols threw open the gates at the new schoolboy stadium and gave the boys of Boston a much wanted site on which to engage in athletics.

MAYOR'S TWO SONS RAISING FLAG

MYLES "DANIEL WEBSTER" McSWEENEY

Boston Evening American sporting expert who was asked by Mayor Nichols to address the students at the opening. Mr. McSweeney and his co-worker, Joe Cashman, put the idea for a stadium across after 25 years of suggestions—but no results.

Coach Sampson's Novel Training Rules Finds Team in Condition

With every member of its first squad in perfect condition, the Tufts gridiron aggregation left for Portland this afternoon by bus.

They were honored guests last night at a monster mass meeting held in the Goddard Gymnasium, which was sponsored by Tower Cross, the senior honorary society of the college.

Short speeches were made by "Fish" Ellis and Coach Sampson. The team was cheered to the echo by an enthusiastic gathering.

It is seldom that a team enters a major struggle in such fine condition as this Tufts team is in. Coach Sampson has once more demonstrated the usefulness of his novel system of training, by means of which he has had his Tufts athletes in perfect condition for every one of its objective games for the last two years.

Few and light scrimmage sessions, no grass drill, no tiresome work on the charging machine and tackling dummy, and a great many games of tag football are some of the highlights of the revolutionary training system that has taken the drudgery out of the daily football sessions for the victorious Jumbos.

If the team can win over Bowdoin it will enter the Brown game next week with a record of 12 straight victories. Only two teams have scored on Tufts in running up this string and the Jumbos goal line has yet to be crossed this season.

The greater part of yesterday's short practice session was spent in going over the plays that Bowdoin has used so far this year. The rest of the workout was devoted to signal practice. A squad of 32 men is being taken to Maine.

Crusaders Prepare for Fordham Game

The Holy Cross varsity eleven went through an intensive scrimmage against the freshman team and as a result of a rather mediocre showing, Coach O'Donnell plans another lengthy drill against the frosh today.

The freshmen lined up against the first string team, with Finn Clancy, Dowling and Evers in the backfield, and manifested greater ground gaining proclivities than any of the college teams the Crusaders have met this year.

Armed with Fordham plays, the 1931 team gave the varsity plenty of work and plenty to think about after practice. They gained consistently through the air, and Coach O'Donnell plans tomorrow's scrimmage as sort of a defense against the vaunted aerial attack of the Maroon. Barring injuries between now and game time, O'Donnell will have his full strength, with the exception of Henry Donahan of Forest Hills, veteran halfback, to pit against the invading Cavaliers.

The Purple is not underestimating the strength of the Gotham boys and it is figured that Saturday's game will be one of the toughest on this season's schedule.

Risko-Maloney to Battle on Nov. 30

Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, has been signed to meet Jon Maloney in a 10-round bout at Boston's New Garden on November 30.

Risko will receive a guarantee of $7500 and a 25 per cent privilege. Maloney will pull down 25 per cent of the gate.

Maloney will lose this match if he should lose to Jack Renault next Monday night.

STONEHAM HARRIERS FIND BEVERLY EASY

Stoneham High harriers continued their winning streak by defeating the Beverly High plodders, 26 to 37, over the two-mile Stoneham course. Capt. Austin Patch of Stoneham was home first in 11 minutes, 30 seconds, closely followed by his team-mates Pettingill and Thompson.

Coach Sampson and his Tufts football squad left for Portland this afternoon where they will "lick us" over to Brunswick to play Bowdoin College tomorrow. The squad was in excellent shape for the game and out to score their 12th straight victory. A win over the Maine team will give the morale of the squad added impetus for the Brown game which is next on the Tufts slate.

"THE signing of Al Mello to meet Wop Monolian as an Argonne A. A. feature on November 7 ended what was supposed to be a duel to the pugilistic death between Mister Eddie Mack of the Argonne front and Master Robert Goldman who happens to be the manager of Mello.

"It is possible that Mister Mack may even hand some speculator $40 so that he and Master Robert can snuggle under the same blanket at the Harvard-Army game tomorrow.

"There are few sports which boast of so many high powered feuds as the boxing game. I have known certain young men to talk about each other in such unkind terms that a law abiding citizen would almost be tempted to go into court and ask that the warring parties be forced to put up bonds to keep the peace.

"The feud between Mister Mack and Master Robert has been of long standing. As a result, Mello has never boxed at any of Mack's shows. The New England welterweight champion kept busy showing for the Suffolk A. A., Commercial A. C. and Arena clubs.

"The late Tom Goodwin of the Suffolk Club was the original Mello booster. He probably did more to make Al a card than anybody else. Since the death of Goodwin, no matchmaker has made the effort to secure the proper kind of opponents for the former mill boy.

"I am glad that Mister Mack and Master Robert have buried the hatchet. The general public isn't much interested in boxing feuds, while I know that the sports writers have got tin ears from listening to the caustic remarks hurled down Cauliflower Alley.

"MOST of the boxing feuds have to do with the business end of the game, which, after all, isn't of any great interest to the fans.

"The cementing of the friendship between Mister Mack and Master Robert proved that the Argonne A. A. matchmaker is a perfectly good diplomat. I shall take pleasure in submitting his name to whoever happens to win in the coming presidential election. A diplomat can be of service to anybody.

"Mack first displayed his talents as a diplomat when he formed a warm friendship with Large Dan Carroll. I can remember when Washington street was not sufficiently wide for Mister Mack and Large Dan to pass each other without them at least exchanging a few growls. As a result of Mister Mack and Large Dan deciding to row the same boat, each has profited.

"Large Dan has some good fighters under his management, while Mister Mack has the mysterious IT known as ballyhoo ability.

"EARLY in the summer Mister Mack pulled Rip Valenti, manager of Sammy Fuller, into his static web. I understand that this friendship has been interrupted by a few stormy sessions, but on the whole it has gone along fairly well.

GRANT HOLDING COMPANY IN POWER PROBE

By M. L. RAMSAY

Washington, Oct. 19 (Universal)—Rates exacted from electric consumers in hundreds of cities and towns throughout the country are involved in the contest over secret financial records of the Electric Bond and Share Co., which have been ordered to be produced before the federal trade commission before next Tuesday morning.

The company's refusal to open these records to the federal trade commission, or to answer questions about them, has virtually assured a battle in the courts to determine the commission's powers.

Records already obtained by the commission show that the Electric Bond & Share, itself a giant holding company, as having under its banner five other great holding companies. These in turn control, directly or indirectly, more than 200 public utility companies.

Both the holding companies and the companies they control turn to Electric Bond & Share for "supervision" and "special services" under written contracts, according to the records. When they borrow money by issuing securities, or build a new plant, they pay fees to Electric Bond & Share.

The fees come out of the companies' revenues for furnishing electric or other service to consumers. Their amount has been permitted to remain a family secret, officials pointed out, because state commissions lacked power to examine them in the aggregate, and gave them little attention individually. The Senate specified them among the subjects it ordered investigated.

Control over the holding companies and their subsidiaries is further strengthened by interlocking directorships, according to the records.

Says Ignorance of Our Country Criminal

"IT is appalling the number of intelligent, well-educated people in the United States who know so much about every other subject, and so little about the affairs of their country.

"This ignorance is criminal, and unnecessary when there are so many good translations of official organs of other countries!" Mrs. Benjamin L. Robinson, president of the Massachusetts Public Interests League says emphatically.

"No, I don't mind if you write what I tell you so long as it drives home the lesson accurately," she assured me. "I was informed of things on the continent this summer that I don't suppose six people in America have heard." Her blue-gray eyes flashed. "The only flaw in our armor is not being able to tell all we know." This gentle, white-haired little woman with the individuality that Reynolds or Gainsboro loved to paint, has given her life to stamping out Communist propaganda, getting behind so-called "Peace Leagues" and rooting out the "Reds" who are invariably at the head of them. Her organization has been in existence about 10 years now, and has a wonderful record for Red Cross work during the war.

"THEY MEAN WAR"

"Over a million under arms in Russia right now—with the best air fleet in the world. The government employs the people, and then deducts a certain amount of their wages to buy machines of war. Why all this preparedness and what is all this talk about other countries cutting down their armies and battleships? The answer is simple enough, they mean WAR, and they intend to catch the other side unarmed."

The league is holding a fair in Horticultural Hall today, and I hope they make so much money they'll have to hire an armored car to carry away the proceeds.

RADIO FIRMS IN BIG MERGER

C. A. Earl, president of Chas. Freshman Co., today announced the consolidation of Freshman with Freed-Eisemann.

The administrative and selling policies of the Freed-Eisemann organization will continue as heretofore. Products of both companies will be sold under the present trade marks and they will have the additional benefits of increased strength behind them.

Inasmuch as both companies have outgrown their present factory quarters it is the intention in the near future to seek new factory locations where both concerns will be under one roof. Mr. Earl in addition to his duties as president of the Chas. Freshman Co., Inc., is to become chairman of the board of directors of the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corp.

The officers of the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corp. will be as follows: President, Jos. D. H. Freed; vice-president and secretary, Arthur Freed; vice-presidents, Arthur A. Trostler and Leo Freed; treasurer, W. J. Lyons. Jos. D. H. Freed and Arthur Freed are to become directors and vice-presidents of the Chas. Freshman Co., Inc."

Officers of both companies look forward to unusual benefits from this plan. Both companies have enjoyed a remarkably favorable trade season in 1928.

FANNIE BRICE SELLS HOME TO "ESCAPE SERVANTS"

New York, Oct. 19 (AP)—Fannie Brice is in action the contents of her home. Why? "In order to get away from starving," she said. "They nearly killed me. I live in a hotel now. When I press a button a servant comes." Her own servants, she added, did everything but work. She stood it 13 years.

BARON FORCED TO LAND IN JAPAN

By BARON G. VON HUENEFELD
(Aboard Airplane Europa on Flight Around World, En Route to Tokio From Berlin.)

Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service. World Rights Reserved.

Tokio, Japan, Oct. 19—From Germany to Japan. The Europa a good will flight ended with a forced landing in a rice field along the Tenagawa river several miles from Tokio. The occupants providentially are safe but the plane suffered. The propeller was bent and the direction indicator was damaged when the Europa mired in the mud two feet in depth.

A lone laborer discovered us, and greatly excited, notified the police who came and assisted us to throw a tent over the plane and to improvise a fence around it so that the curious could not aproach too near. Soon a throng of men, women and children from a nearby rice field village in this semi-wilderness between Osaka and Tokio headed by the master of the settlement came plodding through the mud to greet us.

Gracious hospitality was offered us in the tea house of the little town. We drank tea and ate rice cakes amid great bowing and questioning. Our conversations were carried on through a police interpreter.

To avoid a typhoon supposed to be hovering sinisterly in the vicinity, we left Shanghai in the dead of night and thereafter encountered head winds, side winds, rain and fog, as we flew across the North China sea. The mist compelled us to steer by dead reckoning. After leaving Osaka our outlook was discouraging on account of the numerous geographic barriers ahead. We were only a few hundred feet above the Hakone mountain range when Pilot Linder was forced to turn the Europa seawards again and follow the coast line.

For one hour we circled the city of Tokio unable to find a suitable landing place. We looked down on hundreds of rice fields, but did not succeed in sighting the Tachikawa airfield, where throngs of people were awaiting us. When at last we alighted in the deep mud of this rice field a flock of welcoming planes, led by an army plane, came from Tokio, and circled above our stranded machine and dropped messages of greeting down to me.

Personally, I am feeling the effects of the marked change in climate of the flight from India. The nights of Japan have a touch of chill. However, I am in splendid spirits. When we left Shanghai we were accorded a rousing farewell by officers of the Chinese army and aviators of the British Royal Air Force. Wilhelm Solf, German ambassador to Japan, entertained us informally. We expect the next six days to be busy ones—filled with entertainment and with inspection and work on the Europa. Since our leaving Berlin September 18 we have flown 18 000 kilometers.

How do you judge an inexpensive dress?

Of course, you note the quality of the material, you note its color and you do not fail to observe features of style—but isn't there something else to be considered, something much more important—the reputation of the store you buy from. It takes an expert to judge a diamond and it takes just as much of an expert to judge an inexpensive dress. It requires unusual resources to secure fine materials for inexpensive dresses. It requires great amount of care to secure exactly the right shade and only the store itself can speak with certainty as to how the dress was made. Yes, indeed, it is most important to consider the reputation behind the dress.

Halloween Dessert Recipes Given

WE don't know what the ancient Druids or Romans, or even the early Christians ate when they celebrated Halloween. We don't even know just what their rites were. But we do know that Halloween is one of our oldest festivals, and that it is a favorite and interesting time to entertain.

Perhaps it is due to the keen fall weather that it has become a tradition that whatever food is served on this festive night should be substantial and satisfying. There is none of this fluffy meringue and apple whip and concomme listed on the Hallowsen menu.

Martha Lee

Instead, doughnuts, pumpkin pie, nut-foods of this type are the ones which sustain us after converse with witches and goblins.

Caramel Nut Loaf Cake—Cream ¼ cup butter and 1 cup sugar and add 4 egg yolks beaten until thick and lemon colored. Add ¼ cup milk alternately with the following ingredients which have been sifted together 1¾ cups cake flour, 2½ tsps. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt. Add 2 tbsps. caramel flavoring and 1 cup of nuts mixed with 2 tbsps. flour. Pour into a well-greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg., for 45 to 60 minutes.

Caramel Icing—Mix 2 cups confectioner's sugar, 2 tbsps. evaporated milk or cream, 2 tbsps. caramel flavoring and 2 tsps. melted butter until creamy. If too thick to spread well, add more evaporated milk or cream, drop by drop, until the consistency is right.

Golden Moons—Cream 2 tbsps. butter and ½ cup sugar, and add 1 well-beaten egg yolk. Add ¼ cup milk alternately with 2 cups flour and 2 tsps. baking powder sifted together. Fold in 1 stiffly beaten egg white. Put in small molds and steam 20 minutes. Put contents of a can of apricots through a sieve, and pour over the steamed puddings, almost surrounding them.

No wonder so many men like to go to Halloween parties. As one man expressed it: "We get something to eat besides a little cup of coffee and a piece of lemon meringue." And he is right. Pumpkin pie, apples, hearty sandwiches, and substantial entrees are all on the Halloween menu.

The hostess, sometimes, however, is somewhat at a loss as to what kinds of sandwiches to serve, for she wants something new and yet easy to make. One way of gaining novelty in sandwiches is to cut them in fancy shapes. For instance, if you have four kinds of sandwiches, cut them into circles, diamonds, hearts and spades.

Pile them on a plate and let the guests help themselves. When each has one, announce that the sandwiches are magic ones and that the shape chosen denotes the luck each individual will have during the coming year.

A circle means happiness; diamond, money; heart, luck in love; spade, that you're out of luck.

But you want to know just what to put inside them as well as how to fix up the outside, so here are some new sandwich fillings:

Sardine and Beet—Spread bread with softened butter, then with a very thin coating of mustard. Arrange several boned sardines on each slice, sprinkle a little lemon over them, cover with thinly sliced beet pickles and top with another slice to buttered bread.

Baked Bean Sandwiches—Mash 2 tups cold baked beans, add 2 tbsps. chili sauce, 1 tbsp. chopped capers, 2 tbsps. chopped dill pickles, salt and paprika. Spread between buttered slices of brown bread.

Corned Beef and Pickle Sandwiches—Chill corned beef overnight in the refrigerator. Cut in thin slices. Place a slice on a slice of buttered bread, cover with a thin coating of chili sauce and then cover generously with sweet gherkins sliced lengthwise. Top with another slice of buttered bread.

Tongue and Chicken Sandwiches—Remove the contents of a can of ox tongue and a can of chicken without breaking the meat. Slice in thin slices. Place a piece of tongue then a spreading of mayonnaise, then a slice of chicken between two slices of hot, buttered toast. Serve hot.

Rolled Celery and Pimento Sandwiches—Cut the crust off a loaf of very fresh bread and cut in thin slices. Cover with a damp cloth for at least an hour. Butter with creamed butter. Mix very finely diced celery with mayonnaise to moisten, season to taste and spread on bread. Place a long piece of canned pimento across the center of the slice, then roll tightly together with the red pimento showing at each end. Tie with orange ribbon.

Yours for a happy holiday,
MARTHA LEE.

Save Child's Will

By CONSTANCE CAMERON.

"ROY is just as stubborn as he can be," bemoaned the mother of a very determined son. "I just can't break his will."

What an incredibly fantastic ambition—to break the will of another human being, when not a single thing from the washing of one's face to the building of a massive bridge is ever accomplished without the willing to do so.

I had rather seen someone break a child's arm than his will. The former can be remedied. The latter, means ruination and failure throughout life.

If you are the proud possessor of a child who is particularly determined, especially tenacious when he gets an idea in his head, you are indeed lucky, for you have such an excellent groundwork on which to build a helpful, admirable, successful individual. Your job is to see that he wills to do the right thing, the constructive thing that he may be a leader in the world, and a leader who will scrap people toward that which will help them individually, and as a nation or a race.

We need leaders. A child with a determined will is in line for the big task. A child whose desires and ambitions are lovingly watched, intelligently fostered, and bent toward things which make for progress and happiness, will never remain one of the herd. He will make you very proud of him. But if you take the same child, fight this determination, ridicule it, or call him "stubborn" and make him believe that this trait is one to be ashamed of, you will accomplish one of two things. If he is strong enough, he will merely hide his granitic decision to do certain things and do them covertly and become a sneak and a hypocrite, or if not strong enough, you will succeed in breaking his will, and develop an individual who is indecisive, who will power is scattered and disorganized and who will be of little true value to himself or the world.

Our aim should be to allow our children to make their own decisions, not ape ours. The growth of humanity is only aided and nourished by individualism, and this can only take place as people realize that each of us has his own right to power generated by acting "according to reason and not after the manner of others."

Don't make fun of your child's absorption in making an airplane, an absorption which is so pronounced that he forgets to come in to luncheon or does not hear your first call. If he has the gift of concentration, the intensity of desire, the ability to eliminate any other conflicting desires to that extent, he has something which is priceless.

The passive, so-called "sweet" child, who is always willing to follow out your suggestions, and who takes your advice without a murmur, is without doubt an easier child to raise. However, if I had a girl or boy of possibly 12 or 13 years, who ran to me for advice, or who said: "Mother, shall we do this" or "What dress would be best to wear" or "How many handkerchiefs shall I take for the week-end?" I should feel like weeping at my failure. Yet, so many of us hold selfishly onto our children's dependence upon us. It flatters us. But it does not help them to be thinking individuals.

Don't regret it if you have a sturdy, determined child who walks straight on without clinging to your hand at every step. Be unselfish and rejoice that he not only moves about, as so many beings in this world do, but that he moves on, and AHEAD, with a purpose.

How to Improve Weak Appetites

By DR. BRICE BELDEN

WHAT is hunger?

What gives that seat to hunger that we call appetite?

And, finally, what is it that sometimes causes us to lose our appetites?

Hunger, the physiologists tell us, is caused by emptiness of the stomach. This, in turn, is caused by our rhythmic habit of taking food.

There is no doubt that appetite is to a large extent dependent on the tone of the stomach, and excessive appetite or loss of appetite may indicate disease in the gastro-intestinal tract.

On the other hand, appetite is a capricious thing and vagaries may be curable by very simple means. Take the individual who sits down to his meals without any desire or inclination for food, but in whom the sense of appetite develops as he eats. He is often an overworked professional or business man whose meals become a necessary nuisance in the day's routine.

A brief rest before the chief meals of the day and the adoption of the excellent and time-honored custom of dressing for dinner generally cures this trouble.

Another type of sufferer is the thin-drawn woman who finds that, though she wants her food, the first mouthful causes such feelings of distension and discomfort that further eating is impossible. This may often be due to loss of tone in the stomach, so that for the time being the organ cannot adapt itself to the sudden introduction of food. Insult is often added to injury by offering it only soft milky food, which is the worst thing under the circumstances. This sort of thing demands absolute rest, for it denotes nerve exhaustion; it is often put right by a few days in bed in an airy room, free from worry, with frequent small meals of easily-digestible solid food.

Vomiting is much exaggerated by most people as a sign of gastric disorder. It depends, in fact, so much more on distant and psychic factors than upon the local condition of the stomach, that is true cause is difficult to analyze. The morning vomiting of some so-called dyspeptics is more often than not due to an unhealthy condition of the nose and throat. Secretions from inflamed tonsils or catarrhal nose trickle down the throat during the night and irritate it as soon as the individual wakes up. The result is to stimulate coughing, air-swallowing or retching first thing in the morning. Tobacco is a potent irritant of this kind, and the "morning vomiting of smokers" is not at all an uncommon thing. If you are sick when you get up in the morning, try a nasal spray and gargle and a few less smokes.

Pain around the heart or upper part of the stomach is a symptom meriting respect. The pain from stomach disorder may be early, soon after food is taken, or late, when the stomach is nearly empty. The pain of ulcer of the stomach comes on about one-half to one hour after the meal, and then goes off again, so that there is a regular cyclic pain. comfort, food, comfort, pain—and so on.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

What is the best form to which to send invitations to tea?

T. P.

THE invitations to a tea are usually written on a visiting card. The items of information—day, date, hour, function and so forth—are written on the left side, upper and lower, and are spaced as artistically as possible. For instance, the day and date (Wednesday, the first of February) may be written in the lower left space, and below that "Tea, at four o'clock" or "Tea, four to seven." If there is to be an honor guest, you may write above the engraved name:

To meet
Miss Helen Butler.

If the address is not engraved in the lower right corner of the card, it must be written in. Or, if you prefer, you may write notes of invitations. The visiting card invitation is popular because it is so much easier than writing notes. For a very small tea party, you may, if you wish, telephone the invitation, but this, too, is not so easy as writing the card invitations. And the the written invitation is less likely to make mistakes as to day, time and so forth.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Is it or is it not the custom that the mother furnish her daughter with her bridal outfit?

2. Is is not the young bride-to-be's duty to send out the engagement announcements?

We are two girl friends. We believe we are right in our contentions, but every one seems to have different opinions as to the above two questions, so we have brought our difficulties to you

TWO GIRL FRIENDS.

EITHER the parents of the bride, or the bride herself, if she is paying for her own wedding, buys the bridal outfit. In any event, it is never permissible that the groom pay for it or any part of it—even if he is a multimillionaire and she is the poorest of maidens!

2. Yes—if engagement announcements are sent. But it is not good form to send out formal engagement announcements. The well-bred bride-to-be writes notes to her best friends telling them the news.

INVITE HIM TO CALL

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I have met a young man who has asked if he may call on me out, and I want to have my manners of the best. I have asked him to call at my home, so that he could meet my family. Was that correct?

2. What would be the best form of introduction when I present him to my family? What form of introduction to my friends and relatives?

ANXIOUS.

FIRST, congratulations for your sure taste in inviting the young man to come to your home first and meet your family. He will appreciate this taste on your part and will admire your breeding. If girls only realized what a thrill this invitation makes with a well-bred man they would extend it oftener.

2. Family introductions are more informal than other kinds of introductions, and the words "this is" are often used. For instance, "Mr. Bailey, this is my mother," or "Mr. Bailey, this is my father."

When you are introducing a man to a woman it is always excellent taste to use the form "Miss Lady, may I present Mr. Gentleman?" It is an excellent form to use when you are introducing the young man to your mother: "Mother, may I present Mr. Bailey?" "Miss Julia, may I present Mr. Bailey?" This form is so much used by people of taste and discrimination because they realize that introductions are important, and that, therefore, the form of an introduction, especially if it is an introduction of special significance, should be clothed in important words. If you wish, you may substitute the word "introduce" for the word "present." "Mother, may I introduce Mr. Bailey?"

STOLEN LOVE

Author of "The SECRET STUDIO"

Will Any Man Love a Girl Who Has a Past She Tries to Hide?

CHAPTER 28

MAISIE'S scream rose thin and curving, curving around the limp hand that dangled from the bed, curving into Joan's consciousness, bringing her back . . . back from the blackness in which she had floated all night, the formless, peaceful blackness, in which there were no thoughts, no memories, no tears . . . nothing . . .

"My God, Maisie panted . "I thought—I thought for a minute—" Its warm hands were on Joan's cold shoulders. lifting them. "You gave me an awful turn, lying there so quiet, with all your clothes on . . . Johnnie's . . . tell Maisie . . . something happened! Tell Maisie!"

And then in a high, scolding voice she cried, "You haven't gone and broke your engagement, you foolish girl?"

Joan held out her hand, the lim, blue-hand on which Curtis's ring still blazed, brightly in the sun.

"Well, then, if nothing's happened. I think you're a mighty silly girl, lying on top of your bed all night with your clothes on, catching your death of cold . . . Now you go take a warm bath an' a good cold shower, an' I'll have breakfast ready . . . of all the foolishness I ever did see . . . givin' me a turn like that . . ."

"You'd better phone Fanny," she said, still in the brusque, scolding tone she used to cover up her emotion, "an' tell her I overslep,' and you're going to be good and late."

"Yes," Joan said docilely.

But it was Curtis's number she called when Maisie had gone bustling down the back stairs to complain about the garbage sesin.

"Curtis, this is Joan. I'm sorry if I disturbed you. . . . I just remembered that it is the Cunningham's dinner dance tonight. Could you tell them I'm ill, please, Curtis? . . . Oh, no, no—please don't ask me—I couldn't face them—I couldn't. . . . All right, if you think it is best. . . . Yes, I'll manage, somehow."

The orchestra was playing when they came in, Joan and Curtis together, for the last time, surely for the last time . . . he wouldn't expect her to do it again. . . .

Mollie Davis looked and laughed.

"Look at him mooning at the Hastings girl, for you sak me she carries that Lily Maid or Astolat stuff too far. She looks like something washed up by the tide—"

"Mollie!"

Mollie Davis looked and laughed.

"Look at him mooning at the Hastings girl, for you sak me she carries that Lily Maid or Astolat stuff too far. She looks like something washed up by the tide—"

"Mollie!"

Lyla Barstow set down her teacup with a little tinkling sound. "Well, she does. Did you ever see anything like the way he keeps looking at her? He hasn't taken his eyes off her once all evening."

Mollie was right, he hadn't.

He couldn't. When he took her hand to dance with her it burned him coldly, like ice. He was repelled and attracted and torn a dozen ways at once. He saw her white beauty, clear and clean and virginal. Her pathetic childish lips, scarlet in the white of her face. Her deep gray-green eyes, the color of troubled waters, half hidden by the long golden lashes, just deeper than the gold of her hair. Her dear, curly head tilted like a flower on a stem of goodness . . .

"She is good," he thought, "she is. She couldn't look that way and not be . . . no matter what she did . . . what tragic, pitiful mistake of the past . . ."

"And then he'd see her dancing, someone else's arms about her. Someone holding her close, someone whispering to her, loving her perhaps . . . Good God—what if that were the man . . . it might be . . . it might be someone he met every day of his life, someone who would take his hand and congratulate him, with his tongue in his cheek. 'Lucky boy, Barstow. Lucky boy—getting my leavings'"

He'd wipe his damp forehead . . . he couldn't go on. Impossible to go through life, wondering that way. Better never to see her again.

Never to see Her . . . to let her go forever? Joan with the satin like velvet, the sweet red lips . . . Impossible to leave her . . . to give her up now . . . with the wedding date set and the plans all made . . .

"I'm going crazy!—Crazy!" he thought desperately.

And when the gaiety was at its height, when flasks were half emptied and the music was mounting to its height of abandon, when she was dancing, laughingly, with Bert Cunningham, he brought her her coat.

"For heaven's sake, let us get out of here," he said.

Lyla Barstow set down her teacup with a little tinkling sound. "Well, she does. Did you ever see anything like the way he keeps looking at her? He hasn't taken his eyes off her once all evening."

And when the gaiety was at its height, when flasks were half emptied and the music was mounting to its height of abandon, when she was dancing, laughingly, with Bert Cunningham, he brought her her coat.

"For heaven's sake, let us get out of here," he said.

"Did you have a nice trip?" she asked at last—politely, as she would a stranger.

"Oh—fair."

"Your mother has been worried," she went on hurriedly. "She'll be glad you're back—"

"Joan—for heaven's sake, don't make conversation. You'll drive me crazy. I'm nearly crazy now, I've thought and thought until I don't know where I am, or what you've done to me—how this thing affects me—would affect any man— Sometimes I think I judged you too harshly—that you aren't to blame at all—for—for what you are. Sometimes it was all a nightmare that never happened—"

He half stood and went in. "You see how it is—I'm hardly responsible. . . . Christie, you'll have to tell me the whole thing—who this—this fellow was—"

"No, no—I couldn't—you mustn't ask that—I couldn't—"

"You owe it to me. What did you tell me? Nothing. Don't you realize the position in which you have put me? I don't know what to think. I know it wasn't your fault —I know—"

He held up her hand to stop him "I won't lie, Curtis. It was my fault as much as his. I—I loved him—"

He began to walk up and down again, as he had on that other night, in the apartment. He was to have been their home. Up and down, up and down, restlessly, ceaselessly.

"For the last time, Joan—will you tell me who it was?"

"No, Curtis. It wouldn't be fair. If I tell my part, and pay the price —that I have to pay—that's all right. But I haven't the right to—to—don't you see—that I couldn't do that?"

"You're being very gallant," he said bitterly. "I wonder if he has been equally so? Men talk of light women . . . light women! And I'm talking about you—Oh, Joan—don't you see what you've done—how unfair it is to me? I might meet him—shake his hand—invite him to our home—"

She covered her face with her hands then. She couldn't face him, to think of him knowing Bill, as he might some day. He knew Rollo Keyes. It wasn't impossible . . .

"Will you tell me?"

"No, Curtis—no—"

But he bent back, her quivering shoulders scissed him. "There came a sudden rush of tenderness, desire to protect her, to stand between her and the world. His arms tightened about her, and she came to him, and cried.

"Well, just let it go then," he said soothingly. "See how it works out. Try to forget it—"

"To forget it!" she echoed. "To forget we have to decide? We can't —we've got to know—"

"We have two months yet. Plenty of time. We'll see . . . I'll find a way . . . there must be a way—"

"You mean," she said finally, "that you aren't going to tell me now? That you won't tell me whether you'll forgive me and want to marry me or not? You want me to go on this way—not knowing —simply put it from you then—"

"I mean that I'm not prepared to make any definite decision this evening, Joan. It won't be any worse to break in a month from now, if break we must, than to do it now—" She bit her lip. "I—I can't go on that way, Curtis. I want to do what you want—but—I can't do that—"

"I don't know, Mrs. Barstow."

"He wouldn't have gone off that way without some reason. You are sure you didn't quarrel, Joan?"

"No, we didn't quarrel"

"Not that there would be any excuse for quarreling with Curtis. There never was anyone so easy to get along with as he. Joan, I don't want to hurt you, but have you understood Curtis? He hasn't been himself since—since the engagement. My dear, do you think you will make him happy? Wouldn't it be better—"

Joan just twisted her handkerchief in her hands.

"You see what I mean. If you can't get along, surely it is better to admit it now. Much as I'd hate to see it broken off—"

The next day she began all over again, telephoning Joan bright and early, at the shop. "Joan? This is Mrs. Barstow. You haven't heard from Curtis? I can't understand it. I'm wiring Baker's in Seattle, I don't know why he hasn't written."

Baker's reported briefly and collect that Mr. Barstow had not as yet called at their office.

Curtis had no intention of calling at Baker's. He simply went because he had to go somewhere, and it was the first place that occurred to him. He had to get away from Joan and San Francisco. Had to get away to think. . . .

And besides—there was Blanche, who had housekeeping rooms in an old house way out on Fifth st.

"Sure" she said on the telephone. "Bring the chicken, and I'll get busy on it. I got six bottles of good beer I'll bring in on the last trip over. . . . No, he ain't in port now, not until the 22nd. Gee, I'm glad you're in town. I was kinda lonesome. Gloria has been talkin' about you, too. Only this morning she said to me, 'Mamma, why don't Uncle Curt come no more?—the poor kid, she likes you!" So Curtis went.

Blanche put both arms around him and kissed him soundly. "I am glad to see you—what's the matter with your old firm that they don't send you up here an' more? You're a stranger, you know. Turn around. I have missed you—"

Curtis stayed two days. He bought a blue tweed sports coat with a diminutive squirrel collar for Gloria. The blue just matched her eyes.

"You shouldn't have!" Blanche scolded affectionately. "I'll it does look sweet on her. Turn around Lovey, and let Mamma see the back. Ain't you the proud baby! Curt, if I've told you once I've told you twenty times, I'm no gold-digger, you don't have to go and spend all your money . . . I declare I never saw a fellow as crazy about kids as you are. You ought to get married and have about six yourself!"

The hot tears stung his eyes. Blanche understood him. Blanche appreciated him. She knew all he would do for the girl he married, how generous he would be, how kind . . . All he would have done for Joan . . . if she hadn't spoiled it . . . Wrecked his life. . . .

He couldn't be happy with her now, she had made that impossible, but neither could he be happy without her. Might as well go back and see her again, talk to her . . .

So he came back.

He came to Maisie's flat in the evening, after the dishes were done.

When Maisie saw him at the door she snatched her old coat off the hook on the back porch and hurried down the back stairs to Mine Harvey's. They didn't even know she had gone.

"Curtis!" John whispered. "You've—come back!"

"Yes," he said huskily, "I've come back. I couldn't stay away. I love you, Joan—I love you——"

He held her close, so close that he could feel her heart beating against his. She was so pathetically glad to see him. She put out her slim, cool hand and touched his cheek. "I missed you terribly," she said, "I'm so glad you've come back."

For a moment he thought guiltily of Blanche. Funny that they should say almost the same thing. . . .

"Have you—decided?" she asked, very low.

No pleading in her voice, no humility—just the question—"Have you decided?"

"Why couldn't you let me have one moment of happiness?" he burst out suddenly, "without reminding me—reminding me——"

She hung her head. "I'm sorry, Curtis. It's all I've thought of. It's very hard—waiting——"

She reached out her arms to him again, but the first moment of ecstasy was gone, gone as if it had never been. She only knew that her head was aching, and in some inexplicable way she had failed him again.

"Did you have a nice trip?" she asked at last—politely, as she would a stranger.

"Oh—fair."

"Your mother has been worried," she went on hurriedly. "She'll be glad you're back—"

"Joan—for heaven's sake, don't make conversation. You'll drive me crazy. I'm nearly crazy now, I've thought and thought until I don't know where I am, or what you've done to me—how this thing affects me—would affect any man— Sometimes I think I judged you too harshly—that you aren't to blame at all—for—for what you are. Sometimes it was all a nightmare that never happened—"

He half stood and went in. "You see how it is—I'm hardly responsible. . . . Christie, you'll have to tell me the whole thing—who this—this fellow was—"

"No, no—I couldn't—you mustn't ask that—I couldn't—"

"You owe it to me. What did you tell me? Nothing. Don't you realize the position in which you have put me? I don't know what to think. I know it wasn't your fault —I know—"

He held up her hand to stop him "I won't lie, Curtis. It was my fault as much as his. I—I loved him—"

He began to walk up and down again, as he had on that other night, in the apartment. He was to have been their home. Up and down, up and down, restlessly, ceaselessly.

"For the last time, Joan—will you tell me who it was?"

"No, Curtis. It wouldn't be fair. If I tell my part, and pay the price —that I have to pay—that's all right. But I haven't the right to—to—don't you see—that I couldn't do that?"

"You're being very gallant," he said bitterly. "I wonder if he has been equally so? Men talk of light women . . . light women! And I'm talking about you—Oh, Joan—don't you see what you've done—how unfair it is to me? I might meet him—shake his hand—invite him to our home—"

She covered her face with her hands then. She couldn't face him, to think of him knowing Bill, as he might some day. He knew Rollo Keyes. It wasn't impossible . . .

"Will you tell me?"

"No, Curtis—no—"

But he bent back, her quivering shoulders scissed him. "There came a sudden rush of tenderness, desire to protect her, to stand between her and the world. His arms tightened about her, and she came to him, and cried.

"Well, just let it go then," he said soothingly. "See how it works out. Try to forget it—"

"To forget it!" she echoed. "To forget we have to decide? We can't —we've got to know—"

"We have two months yet. Plenty of time. We'll see . . . I'll find a way . . . there must be a way—"

"You mean," she said finally, "that you aren't going to tell me now? That you won't tell me whether you'll forgive me and want to marry me or not? You want me to go on this way—not knowing —simply put it from you then—"

"I mean that I'm not prepared to make any definite decision this evening, Joan. It won't be any worse to break in a month from now, if break we must, than to do it now—" She bit her lip. "I—I can't go on that way, Curtis. I want to do what you want—but—I can't do that—"

Cheaters

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

THERE are cheaters at cards, cheaters in business, cheaters in almost every walk of life, but the love cheater is by far the worst.

To cheat love is essentially to cheat yourself in the end. Particularly when the loved one thinks you are just about perfection. When you're dancing and you flirt over the adoring shoulder of your partner you're really committing one of the worst crimes known in the realm of love. Just think how you'd feel if you caught your partner flirting! Wouldn't it hurt you and make you feel silly and foolish? Wouldn't it make you think that you were being "made a fool of"?

Then take the lesson to heart! Your partner probably would feel exactly the same way if he knew what you were doing, and it is no sign of your charm and loveliness to know you are trying to steal the one whom Love has destined for another.

So watch your step! Don't cheat! It may be lots of fun for the time being, but later on it may make you the most unhappy and miserable person in the world. Love always punishes the cheaters, and in ways and means all his own, and you don't want him to pass you by, do you? Certainly not! So guard your eyes and your lips and keep them from straying, for in this way does happiness lie.

'Tiger Love'; A Thrilling Chapter In Amazing Serial

ward the woman. Then he called out a command which Roala instinctively knew was of the native tongue, yet a word which she did not know!

The woman smiled, closed her lips as she swung her voluptuous body from side to side and tossed a kiss, in the European manner, to the white man. Gradually her rhythmic movements changed to a dance which Roala, dancer of the most naive, uncommercialized conventionality, was horrible!

The men cried encouraging words, the musicians chanted words whose tribal meaning brought bursts of mirth from the ruffians; the women threw off their garments in shreds, tossed them into the air and began dancing about the ring of specially barred floor, closer and closer to her in their bestial delight.

Worse and worse grew the sex revelry—out of the scene, as she pounded from one spectator to another, tossing an arm about neck of an aged and very drunken Chinaman, here, and then embracing a very Nubian there, leering a grinning Sikh, pulling by hair of dignified, if inebriated Hindu Row and finally ending in a sudden shriek of demonine laughter as she ran close to the tall white trader who was guarding Roala against possible escape.

The wanton threw her naked arms about the man's neck, buried her teeth in his cheek and as he leaped back, blood streaming from the imprint, she lunched with fiendish glee, screamed shrilly and ran back to the center of the ring of onlookers.

"I'll kill you for that!" cried the big white man, wiping his sensitive hand with the back of his head as he started toward her.

"No, no, Bill! It was you was in the wrong!" one of his companions, interrupting Lou with a roar of drunken laughter. "She an artist, she is!"

The woman ran her brown hands with their red painted nails through her long black hair. Her black eyes sparkled as she moved in time of a calypso and pointed a long finger at the trembling Roala.

"Is that dancing?" she cried, shrilly.

The crowd howled, then paused in mid-down in the [illegible] frowned and the other [illegible] to [illegible] like [illegible].

Roala turned her face with her hands, her shoulders warm and big, in an unconscious gesture of horror. Her breath was [illegible] and choked in her throat. The pounding of [illegible] in this sudden paroxysm of [illegible] and disgust caused [illegible] to [illegible] dizzy. She had ever [illegible].

The tall trader, imagine his bleeding face with a [illegible] kerchief, and visible attempting to [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] by the end with fury. No longer did he try to reach the vixen who had incited her passion upon him. He looked down at the cowering figure before him.

"What a hell of a place to draw this kid!" he suddenly muttered to himself, "We're all a bunch of devils. Ugh!"

His shivered Some revulsion of feeling had come over him; the viciousness of the entire scene suddenly overwhelmed the speak of [illegible] glowing with in him a moment before.

"We're all a bunch of yellow dogs!" he murmured, and then as he looked up his coarse brutling face took on a menacing frown.

Now he realized that the sisters, the professional sisters of the dance or who had bitten him in the chest were all chorusing their derision of the tragic little figure weeping by his side.

"Stop!" he cried, in Hindustani, and repeated the command in [illegible] dialect. "I'll see that this little girl has her chance clear the [illegible]

And suddenly, his hand drawn a wide circle, or I'll begin shooting" [illegible] yet!"

Yellow, brown and white faces changed expression and the figures pressing so closely about him shrank away. He touched Roala lightly on the shoulder.

"I saw this woman dance in the market place. Her dance became a religious [illegible] for [illegible] to a hoe like it is. But I'll wager you can outdance anyone in this town or anywhere in India. And it will be Indian dancing, not [illegible] stuff!"

His glassy eyes blazed with the fury of a [illegible] murderer.

He repeated his challenge

"Oh, let the girl go away!" begged Roala, barely above a whisper.

"No!" he shouted. "You must dance in this place. You must show dancing here before I clean it out. And then . . . I'll clean it out."

Who can tell what turns a man to [illegible] or good?

This hard visaged veteran of a thousand disreputable exploits in the less-visited ways and by ways of India had been the ring leader in the drink-mad scheme to draw the dancing girl and old Pairin Gad, with Night, to [illegible] den of iniquity. And now, with sudden inoculation from a human viper's teeth, some magical inner chance had come over him. Yet, the traces of [illegible] still clung to him. Deep [illegible] was his firm determination that the dancer of the highways and the by-ways should once more step through the quaint and picturesque measures of an ancient Oriental figure.

"Stand up!" he commanded.

The long years of training in obedience brought the girl to her feet, subconsciously. And, there was some note, indefinable, in his voice which reassured her.

"Clear the way," cried the tall trader. "This girl will dance now."

AUCTION BRIDGE

DUMMY'S RIGHTS

DURING the play, Dummy may not:

1. Warn Declarer that he is about to lead from the wrong hand, nor tell him which hand has the lead. Penalty: either adversary may name the hand from which the lead shall be made.

2. Suggest a lead or play by touching or naming a card, or otherwise. Penalty: either adversary may direct that Declarer make such a lead, or play such card (if legal), or refrain from doing so.

3. Demand that the cards so far played to a trick be indicated by the respective players. The other players have this privilege if the demand is made before the trick is turned and quitted.

Except as provided above, Dummy has all the rights of the other players, unless he intentionally sees the face of a card held by Declarer or either adversary. If Dummy inadvertently sees the face of any other player's card, through the careless holding of the hand, he forfeits none of his privileges. But if he intentionally sees it, he may not call Declarer's attention to:

1. Any legal right. Penalty: forfeiture of such right.

2. A card exposed by an adversary. Penalty: the card is no longer exposed.

3. An adverse lead out of turn. Penalty: the adversaries, after consultation, may decide which of them shall lead.

4. An adverse revoke. Penalty: the revoke may not be claimed.

5. The fact that he has refused a suit by asking him whether he have any more of it. Penalty: Declarer many not change his play and is liable for any revoke resulting therefrom.

The Laws state, under the heading of "Ethics and Etiquette:" "Dummy should not leave his seat to watch Declarer play." For Dummy to look at an adversary's cards is not, however, classed as unethical, but in view of the privileges forfeited by so doing, it is inadvisable for him to do so.

The most important of the forfeited privileges are (4) and (5). The former renders Dummy powerless to correct a renounce by Declarer; the second prohibits him from claiming an adverse revoke.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

DELIGHT FOR CHILD

By CONSTANCE CAMERON.

EVERY once in a while I get a cleaning fit and decide firmly and conclusively that I WILL throw one earnest fall of the huge pile of magazines which have collected. I open all on the floor, surrounded by gaily-colored publications, and resolve to just stack them up in orderly piles and put them in the bookcase. Then I must just take a peek into them and the next one, and then I find an article or a story that I haven't read, so I put the magazine aside to be by one until I am confronted by the same pile I started with. Oh, perhaps if I can muster the moral courage to throw away two of three—but never more than three.

Now, if you feel this same urge to keep old magazines around, the sparing can be quite painless, in fact, a joy—if you have a tiny person around the house. His happiness in utilizing discarded magazines will repay you for the pang of removing them from the library table to return never more.

In allowing children to cute pictures from the magazines there will never be the tragedy of father discovering the concluding chapter of his serial story cut to ribbons. If you first provide a big box, or even one drawer of an old bureau, in which the youngster can keep all magazines you give him. Let it be understood that reading matter is sacred and must not be destroyed or used to play with UNLESS it appears in that particular box or drawer.

First suggest that he cut out a family of paper dolls. The fashion pages hold many attractively colored pictures of grown folk, children in rompers, children in bathing suits—in fact, the children can find them in any garb he especially desires to play about.

When he has a good-sized collection of paper dolls, suggest that one of them have a party and invite the rest. A party isn't a party without "eats," of course, so he may go eagerly through the magazines, finding tempting pictures of thickly-frosted cakes, delicately pink jello, chicken salad, and so on. A house for the dollies to entertain in may be built with his blocks on the floor. A table can be constructed of one or two flat blocks and decorated with a dashing tablecloth in almost any color cut from an old magazine. I saw a colored advertisement for linoleum yesterday which, if cut out, would make a gay tablecover for the dolls' party. Then the pictures of the food may be laid on the table, the dolls seated and the party is in full swing. The child will undoubtedly amplify these suggestions by finding plates and other articles necessary for the well-dressed table.

Block beds are easily made. Any child will show you how, and dolls in cunning night clothes are to be found in profusion on the fashion pages. They will, of course, be put properly to bed by the wee parent.

The activities pictured so well and attractively in the current magazines will suggest different forms of play to you and to your youngster, and these will furnish him with many hours of happy and educational play.

FAMOUS LOVERS

By COZETTE DOUGLAS

THERE are so many conflicting stories about poor Anne Boleyn that it is hard to know exactly what's what regarding her life. However, the most interesting thing about her, the fact that she was one of Henry the Eighth's wives, is what we are chiefly concerned with now.

Anne was the daughter of an English nobleman, Sir Thomas Boleyn, afterward Earl of Wiltshire and Ormonde. When she was but seven years old, she was taken to France by Mary Tudor, sister of Henry VIII., who had married Louis XII. of France. After Louis' death, Anne remained in France as one of the ladies in waiting to Queen Claude, wife of Francis I.

Her beauty and accomplishments were greatly admired at the French court, although some writers say that Anne was not at all prepossessing, nor particularly gifted. However, I prefer to think of her as a very lovely lady, more the victim of her own ambition than the pawn of Fate.

Anne returned to England in either 1521 or 1522, where she was immediately surrounded by many suitors. She entered the court of England as maid of honor to poor, ill-fated Catherine of Aragon, first wife of Henry, and here it was that she first attracted the attention of the king.

A marriage was arranged for her with Sir James Butler, but never took place.

When Henry's affection for Anne could no longer be denied, he applied for a divorce. Poor Catherine was held virtually a prisoner while the divorce was pending, and finally when it was granted, Henry married Anne privately some time in January, 1533. It was not until May of that year, however, that the marriage was declared valid, and the following month Anne was crowned with great state in Westminster Abbey.

However, Anne's triumph was short-lived, for not long after their marriage, Henry transferred his affections to Jane Seymour, who was maid of honor to Anne.

In order to rid himself of Anne, he accused her of infidelity, and four noblemen who were probably unjustly implicated, were executed. Anne was forced to defend herself at the private trial, as no legal advisers were allowed her. Judgment was passed against her, and her children were declared illegitimate, one of them being Elizabeth, who was afterward Queen of England.

In May, 1536, three years after her triumphant coronation, Anne was beheaded.

A sordid romance, it's true, but one of the most famous of all. I've often wondered that Henry could have doubted the love which Anne certainly had for him, as her last words on the scaffold were: "I pray God save the King and send him long reign over you, for a gentler nor a more merciful prince was there never; as to me he was ever a good, a gentle and sovereign lord."

One day at a dinner she said to her neighbor: "Who is that horrible looking man over there?"

Doctor—That is my brother.

3-MINUTE JOURNEYS

By TEMPLE MANNING

NOWHERE on earth are there more problems presented by the peoples of a community, than in South Africa. There is the living example of the "house divided." For not only do the white people quarrel among themselves, difference in nationality and memories of past quarrels contributing largely, but the many races represented among the natives, each with its own particular grievance, make government difficult.

However, many of the disputes have been settled, and South Africa is well on the way to a more definite union.

The student of the South African problem can get a very concrete idea of just what the government has to cope with in Cape Town. Here he will see the natives in their own "element," as it were. Here he will realize that the white man being the skilled worker, the overseer, the native has little chance to better himself. Yet many of the natives have a high type of intelligence and deserve better things than manual labor on the farms and in the mines.

This then, is the problem the government has to cope with: To better the condition of the natives, spiritually and actually.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND.

MY DAUGHTER, hear now the ten secret Commandments, which the Hard-Boiled Bachelor hath set up for himself, that he may dwell all his days in safety and single blessedness.

1—Thou shalt not COMMIT thyself; neither on paper, nor in words, nor in promises, nor in presents. "Say it with flowers," with kisses, with postcards and with sweet nothings—but never with indelible ink.

2—Thou shalt not dally with eligible damsels nor weaken before alluring widows; but confine all thy devotion to frivolous flappers and misunderstood wives. For "Safety First" shall be thy motto. And no woman who looketh longingly upon a wedding ring is safe!

3—Thou shalt not telephone any woman more than once a week, and never twice upon the same day of the week; lest she come to regard thee as a "fixture" and seek to set her seal upon thee.

4—Howsoever often thou marest lose thine heart, thou shalt not lose thy weakness; nor thy past triumphs, nor thy future hope; thy past mistakes nor thy present ire. For a little confession is a dangerous thing. And that which a woman knoweth concerning thee she will use in thine undoing.

5—Thou shalt not make love unto two women in the same house, nor in the same family, nor in the same set. For the small boy that stirreth up a wasp's nest to see what will happen is a tower of wisdom beside a man that mixeth his drinks, his flirtations and his girl friends.

6—Thou shalt not trust thyself for more than 20 minutes alone in the moonlight with any woman under 70. For many a man now wondereth in his heart how an hour in the moonlight should have led to a lifetime of bill-paying and furnace-stoking.

7—Thou shalt not be deceived by the false promises of Platonic Friendship. For by that "name" fell the beneficent Yes, verily. Platonic Friendship is a ship which docketh always at the harbor of Matrimony, or goeth down in a storm of reproach.

8—Thou shalt not look tenderly upon thy stenographer; neither upon the blonde nor the brunette, nor upon the beautiful, nor upon the plain. For, lo, the shortest cut to Matrimony is across the office desk!

10—Thou shalt not be TOO sure of thyself! For many a wise and wily single-footer, who hath started out to "string" a woman, hath lived to find the string transformed into a marriage tie.

Verily, verily, these are the ten secret commandments of a Bachelor, whereby he hopeth to dwell all of his days of life in peace, liberty—and boredom—and to die with his bachelor's buttons on.

IF THE ADS ARE TRUE

Do you always get cleaned in "The Street"?
Do the nags play the deuce with your purse?
Do your plans always meet with defeat?
Is your bank account stuck in reverse?
Is the weather too hot or too cold?
Has your college been trimmed in each game?
Do your friends let their debts grow too old?
Are you always a stranger to fame?
Has your new car developed a knock?
Has your collar at last gone clean dry?
Are your topcoat and timepiece in hock?
Do you find that your taxes are high?
Do you struggle for fortune in vain?
Do the girls spend your cash and forget?
You say yes? Then, my friend, it is plain,
That you don't smoke the right cigarette!

—Delmar Devening.

TRUE CONFESSIONS

I met him by chance in an elevator. He seemed refined. We rode up and down, chatting. Suddenly he proposed marriage. I could think of no reason to deny him this simple request. Weeks passed. Suddenly, one evening, he said, "Let's not go out." We sat silent. Finally I asked, "Who are you, anyway?" He answered, "I am a baritone." That should have warned me. But like a woman I trusted blindly. Then, behind my back, he started to sing, "On the Road to Mandalay." So I shot him. That...is...all...I...remember...nothing...blah!

STOCKS SHOOT UP TO NEW HIGH RECORDS

New York, Oct. 19 (AP)—Speculation for the advance gathered momentum in today's stock market despite the large increase in brokers' loans and unusually heavy week-end profit-taking pools, encouraged by the recent easing of money rates, again pushed forward their favorites, lifting more than a score issues to new high records. Extreme gains in some of the high-priced issues ran from 5 to nearly 30 points.

Its swift was the pace of trading that the ticker fell more than 40 minutes behind the market by early afternoon, and this tended to discourage trading.

Montgomery Ward again led the advance, soaring 19 points to a new high record at 250. Coppers, which have been subjected to accumulation in expectation of an early increase in red metal prices, came to the fore as the American Smelting was marked up 14 points to a new peak at 205.

International Nickel run up 13 points to a new high at 180 on unconfirmed reports that negotiations were under way today for a merger with the Monds Nickel Co., giving them a virtual world monopoly on nickel.

Call money renewed at 6½ per cent, the lowest rate since last Monday, and was in plentiful supply.

Radio, which has been rather quiet for several weeks, suddenly stepped into the speculative spotlight by opening with a block of 10,000 shares at 220 and then moved up to a new high record at 231¼, an extreme gain of 18¼ points. Warner Bros., Auburn Automobile, International Nickel, Insurance, Corporation, Dupont, U. S. Tobacco and American Railways Express sold 8 to 7½ points higher.

Motors turned heavy on the publication of the third quarter Hudson report, showing smaller earnings than in the same period last year. General Motors, which had move up 2 points to a new high at 224¾, lost its gain, as did Studebaker, which had attained a new peak at 87½. Hudson dropped over 8 points before last night's close and Briggs 7¼.

HUNTERS AWAY IN SEASON'S OPENING

Hunters today began their migration into the woods awaiting the opening tomorrow of the gunning season on woodcock, quail, cock, pheasants, gray squirrels, hares and rabbits.

In starting, however, gunners are warned to carry a copy of the game laws, to avoid a fine. There are a number of "don'ts" to be observed with numerous reservations on what may be hunted and the stipulations vary in different counties.

In the counties of Essex, Hampden, Hampshire, Middlesex, Nantucket, Norfolk and Worcester, there is no open season on quail. There is a closed season on pheasants in the counties of Duke and Nantucket. There is a closed season throughout the State on ruffled grouse.

CLOSES NOV. 29

The season on the above game closes November 30, with the exception of hares and rabbits which may be hunted until February 15, and in Nantucket county until February 28.

There is another stipulation on this especial game, for the season on hares and rabbits does not open in Duke County until November 15, and close January 15. European hares may be killed at any time in Berkshire County.

The daily bag limits are as follows

	Daily	Seasonal
Woodcock	4	20
Quail	4	20
Cock pheasant	2	5
Gray squirrels	5	15
Hares	2	No limit
Rabbits	2	No limit

OTHERS PROTECTED

On every game except that mentioned, a complete list of which is contained in the new game laws, there is closed season.

The killing of a cock pheasant must be reported in writing to the Massachusetts Department of Fish and Game, State House, within 24 hours, with complete details as to time, place and number killed.

A few of this year's don'ts are:

Don't trespass on posted property.

Don't destroy fences or stone walls.

Don't point the gun muzzle toward you—remember to point it away from you.

The most important of all; remember to be careful. Don't shoot yourself through carelessness, and don't shoot a fellow hunter.

Be careful!

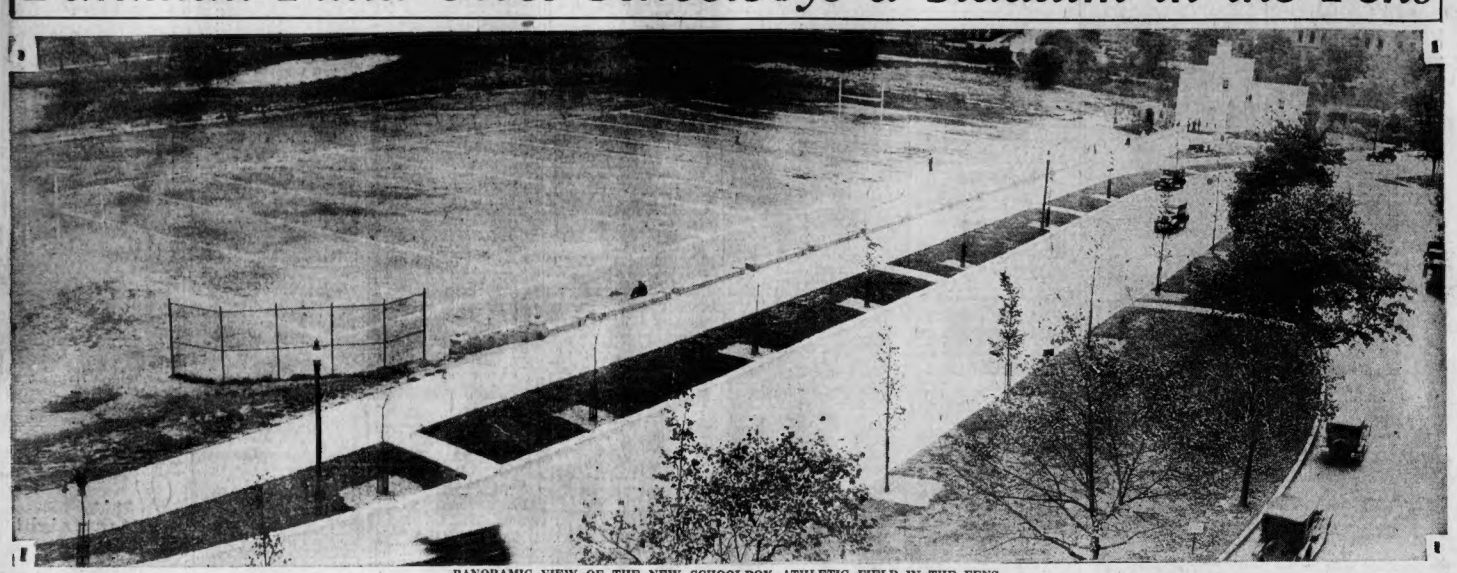
Parkman Fund Gives Schoolboys a Stadium in the Fens



PANORAMIC VIEW OF THE NEW SCHOOLBOY ATHLETIC FIELD IN THE FENS

THE dedication of a field house for the Schoolboy Athletic Field in the Fens calls attention anew to a Boston development in recreation grounds which in magnitude is surpassed by only the Strandway and Franklin Park. If there is any Bostonian who has neglected to make the acquaintance of the NEW Fens—who remembers Muddy River when it WAS muddy—he should do so without delay.

Flanked by such institutions as the Gardner Palace, Simmons and Emmanuel colleges, the Evans Memorial and the Forsyth Dental Infirmary for Children, this edge of Boston's park system remained practically undeveloped until two years ago, when Mayor Nichols at the instance of the Boston Evening American suggested to the Park Department that the time had come when the Fens must be "made over from a dump into a park."

The transformation is nearly complete, as those citizens will testify who saw the new Fens yesterday.

LIKE other large recent plannings by the Park Department, what has been done in the Fens for the boys and girls of Boston was made possible by the Parkman Fund, $270,000 of which is available each year.

In the immediate vicinity there are seven institutions whose students will be accomodated by the new field house. These are the Martin School, the Trade School for Boys, English High, Boston Latin, the parish school of the Mission Church and the High School of Commerce.

THE building yesterday made available to boys and girls—and men and women—is situated immediately to the east of Audubon Road, in the "school district." In the locker rooms on the main floor there are 244 steel lockers for boys and 48 for girls, in addition to shower baths and other accommodations. The exterior design of the field house is suggestive of Spanish influence. The surface finish is of granite composite, scarcely to be distinguished from any light cut-granite.

When the Schoolboys' Stadium is completed it will consist of a football gridiron, two full-sized baseball diamonds and a quarter-mile track, together with reservations for 100-yard and 220-yard dashes, high jumps, pole vaults, shot-put and running broad jump pits. In the Winter there will be skating on a larger area than the surface of the pond in the Public Garden, for the stadium will cover an area of approximately 9 acres.

FOR the transformation of the Fens the city of Boston is in debt to one of its greatest benefactors, George Francis Parkman, whose $5,000,000 legacy has made possible so many recreational improvements. The achievement has been one of the chief interests of Mayor Nichols and it will endure as one of the major accomplishments of his administration.

Chairman William P. Long of the Park Department, in the beginning an earnest advocate of the great work in the Fens, has made this public improvement his first care and constant charge. To Mr. Long, to the Mayor, and to the memory of George Francis Parkman, the boys and girls of Boston are principally indebted for this latest evidence of a great city's abiding interest. The Boston Evening American is proud of its part in the campaign for this great improvement.

Still Make Beer

HOP-PICKING TIME IN ENGLAND

England's hop-picking season, giving healthful, pleasant work for thousands in the open air, is looked upon as a holiday. Even children are engaged in the picking.

And this will HORRIFY prohibitionists. A British newspaper actually prints this picture and under it these words: "BEER, BEER, GLORIOUS BEER!" Think of that and shudder. "Glorious Beer," why the very idea!

We have no public hop-picking and beer-brewing in this country. But we have any amount of beer badly made, so-called "home brew," dangerous to health.

And many workmen unfortunately drink what is called "needled beer," beer sent from the brewery with no alcohol in it and then "needled" in the speakeasy. The needling process is done with a long syringe, filled with alcohol, pumped into the beer keg through the bung or wooden stopper with the aid of a sharp needle.

The alcohol thus injected into the beer is a poisonous product, often made from denatured alcohol sold at gasoline stations.

The alcohol is redistilled and PART ONLY of the poison removed. Then it is sold and drunk in the needled beer.

This picture of gathering hops to make "glorious beer," as the unregenerate Britishers call it, will shock good prohibitionists.

But "needled" beer, with wood alcohol or denatured alcohol, SHOCKS THE AMERICAN KIDNEYS.

FORCE IS DECEPTIVE SHORT CUT

By DR. FRANK CRANE

SOME people still put their reliance in force.

But it is eternally true that they that take the sword shall perish by the sword.

The Czar's rule was one of force and it disappeared in a cloud of blood. The Soviet rule also originated in force, is carried on by force, and will probably come to the same bloody conclusion.

The autocracy of Napoleon was a fitting end to the violence of the French Revolution.

Force is a deceptive shortcut to efficiency.

There is only one thing that can maintain the perpetuity of a government and that is respect for law.

People must learn to be good losers. They must quit seeking to right their wrongs by violence.

There are some who still believe that the best government is autocracy limited by assassination.

But the whole world is struggling upward toward the realm of law. Not only must wars cease as a means of settling international disputes, but violence must cease as a means of righting real or imagined political injuries.

There is no remedy for acts of violence, in the long run, except the widespread and gradual respect for law.

There is no complete personal liberty nor complete national stability except under law.

Government by public opinion, which is another name for democracy, cannot be established unless there is a universal respect for life.

Ideas cannot be assassinated. Killing a person is the argument of a brute. Men should recognize that their only legitimate competition is by ideas.

Those who hope for a revolution, or a new order of things, should be satisfied with argument. The resort to bullets always does their cause more harm than good.

We can only hope and pray that our neighboring republic will cease to depend upon violence and come under the general rule of law.

It may be hard for people of hot blood to submit peaceably to conditions which they deem to be tyrannical and wrong. They have a perfect right to work against these conditions and may be assured that after a while if their cause is just it will prevail.

Universal education, respect for life and universal obedience to law is the only remedy, in the long run, for violence.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19—Thoughts while strolling: Who remembers when a divorcee was snubbed? Those ferocious-looking English bulldogs so gentle babies maul them. Efram Zimbalist, a Rostow-on-Don, Russia, boy, who made good in the city. The Treasure Hunters' Club. Ganna Walska.

Traffic tower clocks always wrong. Gene Crawley. What's become of those pocket knives with a dingus to clean out a horse's hoof? Increase in cider shops. The aristocratic section springing up around Carl Schurz park. And Vincent Astor's handsome new apartment house nearby.

Marked down transformations. Children driving goat teams. Babies asleep on sand piles. Those strange creatures acting as hospital orderlies. Pathetic street preachers who scarcely ever attract an audience. But never give up. A loose steer throws a block in a panic.

Illuminated Al Smith signs on automobiles. Raymond Hitchcock's gray derby. The parade of hearses over the 9th st. bridge. Archie Andrews' yacht—once owned by Henry Ford. Prisoners playing football on Welfare Island. A bird store selling "monkey-faced owls."

The famous East Side gangster who wears horn-rimmed glasses and a Basque cap. In a fair fight I could lick him myself. But they don't fight that way. Abandoned breweries with broken windows and air of desolation. Families that gather on fire escapes and eat raw cabbages.

Young loafers in caps who bully small tradesmen. And loiter around big gas tanks. The sidewalk card writers on East 42nd st. who pen your name with a flourish of curlicues—3 cents a dozen. Combination pool halls and barber shops.

The golden gray twilight. A movie features a pie-eating contest. Wonder if the professional pie-eater enjoys his art. Bold window sign in cafe: "Real Beer." The celebrated Chinese gambler whose girl friend is a striking blonde. And who is reputed to spend $500 a day on Broadway. William Tilden leaving the Algonquin.

THERE are evidences Riverside Drive is to be swank again. It has always been an aristocratic thoroughfare and one of the most beautiful in the city, but for a time was deserted for new and hoity-toity centers such as Park ave. and the Sutton and Beekman Places. It is reported several apartment buildings and old homes eighty north of 72nd st. are to be torn down to make way for private mansions with expansive lawns, fountains and a Pomander walk effect. The Drive offers a magnificent vista of the sparkling Hudson and purpling Palisades, and the parkway on its outer fringe is an added advantage no other street offers.

MANY New York streets have a way of sprawling capriciously into a conglomeration of lights and shadows. Park ave., for instance, is at one end ramparted with de luxe apartment houses for the rich and trails off into a seething Ghetto 28th ave. ripples along with quiet old homes, fine stores and specialty shops, saudy hotels, the fading Millionaires' Row, and it too, ends abruptly in a pushcart market. On Madison ave. one reaches a different social level with every few blocks. Poverty and wealth are blatantly exposed.

EXPERTS say there are more millionaires between 59th st. and 100th on Fifth ave. than any other street in town.

THAT section between 42nd st. and 50th on Broadway seems to me as fascinating as any. At least it has more of that indefinable quality we ink-stained wretches know as "human interest." It has been called the cross-roads of America, and certainly offers the greatest assortment of distinct types found anywhere.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ELLENE wants a Career.

Not just a regular job. Anyone can get a regular job. But Ellene's different. Ellene has a Talent. A Talent for Writing. Ever since she was a little bit of a girl they've printed her pieces in the Greenville News. And last year she had a story accepted in a real magazines. It isn't a very big magazine, but it's real—and of course if you've had a story accepted in a real magazine you can't consider a regular job. You know you're meant for Bigger Things.

So, although Ellene has had several chances to ordinary work, she has turned them all down—the folks say it's pretty tough on the family to have a great big girl of 25 lying around the house idle. But Ellene doesn't care what they say. She's determined to have that Career. But how's she going to get it? How do Talented People get a chance to show the world what they can do? How do Big Writers get to be Big Writers? That's what Ellene wants to know. And I've been picked to break the bad news to her.

Big Writers don't get to be Big Writers by turning down regular jobs, Ellene, and waiting until the world comes along with a lot of sweet kisses and important contracts. The world isn't as excited as that over Talent. For Talent isn't nearly as rare as you think, girlie. It grows on many bushes. Any editor can pick up job-lots of it mighty cheap.

Talent, however great, won't get you very far, by itself. It's a handy thing to have, but, at best, it's only about 50 per cent of the equipment necessary for success. Many people, indeed, have succeeded with almost no talent. How? THEY CRASHED THE GATES!

They were aggressive. They would not be denied. They didn't wait for opportunity to come to them. They went out and made opportunities for themselves. They nailed them, not by merely writing. They made them by clerking in groceries, working in mines, driving laundry vans, stevedoring on docks, tending tables, cooking hash. Some of the greatest women writers achieved success while doing all the work in a poorly equipped home and bringing up a family of children.

They didn't wait for some one to come along and hand them Their Chance on a silver platter. If they had, they'd have waited until doomsday. THEY PROVED THEY WERE WRITERS BY FIRST PROVING THEY WERE ENERGETIC, RESOURCEFUL HUMAN BEINGS.

And, believe me, Ellene, unless you have learned how to live you can't know how to write. For you can't substitute pretty words for service scars.

So, snap out of your dream, my dear, and begin to act regular. Stop sponging off ma and dad and grab the first job that comes along. Work like an honest citizen for your three squares per day and when night comes write. Write, WRITE. That's how Big Writers get to be Big Writers.
